IRELAND CALM OVER FREEDOM PLAN

Austen Lake, Boston Evening American Staff Writer, penning the smash-hit series, "Ireland Today," has returned from the Irish west coast to Dublin to report on the situation throughout the Emerald Isle resulting from the new constitutional pronouncement of freedom by President DeValera. His story follows.

By AUSTEN LAKE
Special Cable to the Boston Evening American

Dublin, Ireland, May 4—The remarkable feature attending the release of the new Irish constitution to the press of this country has been the calm reaction of the Irish people and the steadiness of the Irish stock market while the London "Bourse" and the continental exchanges have been having hysterical heaves over gold shtares and various international troubles.

The Dublin and Cork markets have shown no emotion under the double impulse of foreign ills and the new national charter.

The reason for this lies in the fact that the Irish constitution and its fundamental changes were largely anticipated by the legislation of last December 10 and 11 when two bills (1) the constitutional amendment No. 27, which removes the British King from internal Irish affairs, and (2) the executive authority for external relations, were passed by the Dail Eireann.

Laid to Abdication

The passage of these bills was impelled, as Mr. Eamon DeValera had said at that time, by the crisis in British affairs brought on by the abdication of Edward VIII and the action required by dominion governments.

A definition of Irish policies was necessary, so with typical DeValera directness the functions of the governor-general of Ireland as the resident imperial authority were wiped out.

To get the full impact of this new Irish constitution it is necessary to sketch an outline of the legislative setup which existed in Dublin before last December when the Irish government consisted technically of the King or governor general, the Dail and the Senate. But the senate was abolished in 1936 for certain "obstructionist" activities in one of those punitive Fianna Fail moves leaving the Dail and the governor-general, the latter's duties increasingly hobbled.

Heat Fells First Victim; Mercury Reaches 84

Christopher Spados, 75, of Lynnwood street, Somerville, was overcome while peddling bananas on Victoria street, West Somerville. He was taken to Somerville Hospital where he was revived and treated.

This was the hottest day of the year.

However, the weatherman said he did not expect the temperature to reach 88 degrees, the record for May 4.

The sudden advent of the heat wave sent thousands to the beaches, but few ventured into the water, which, in most places, was around 52 degrees. State bathhouses, under the Metropolitan District Commission, will not be open until June 15.

Handicapped by low tide, if they had planned to go in swimming, 700 persons nevertheless went to South Boston beaches to get the benefits of the cool ocean breezes.

So Little to Battle with Death

EXCLUSIVE! Going on three years old now, Baby Winona Nelson, who spent 90 hours of horror lost in the woods at Upton, was given a gift of a blood transfusion for her birthday, but she still lies weak and pale on her hospital cot. Pneumonia has set in her left lung, gangrene in her left foot. Doctors are fighting and hopeful, however. Today they reported "marked improvement." (Photo by Harry Simard.)

U. S. Consul Haven Dies in Florence

Florence, Italy, May 4 (AP)—Joseph E. Haven, United States consul here for ten years, died today. He was 52 years old and a native of Chicago.

In addition to his consular duties, Haven was United States diplomatic representative to the smallest republic in the world, San Marino.

CONVULSIONS PERIL BABY NELSON'S LIFE

Whitinsville, May 4—Two convulsions threatened the life of Baby Winona Nelson this afternoon.

Given a blood transfusion last night and said to be rallying early today, the two-year-old tot, who was lost for four days and nights in the woods, this afternoon suffered an upset, doctors at the hospital reported.

Her living "very much longer" was termed only a miracle by Dr. John J. Bouvier.

"It is doubtful whether the child has enough resistance to live very much longer. Only stimulants are keeping her alive. It's a miracle she's alive now and it's a miracle if she'll live very much longer," Dr. Bouvier declared.

Bulletin

London, May 4 (INS)—Reuters News Agency stated tonight that it had been officially informed at Tours, France, that no announcement would be made regarding the marriage of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Simpson or their future plans until after the coronation of King George VI on May 12.

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Monts, France, May 4—Five months and a day of patient waiting came to an end for the world's most romantic couple this afternoon when the Duke of Windsor rejoined Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson at the historic Chateau de Cande in Mellow Touraine.

During the many weeks Mrs. Simpson had waited for her divorce to become final and absolute, she and the king who for love of her had renounced throne and country were separated by nearly a thousand miles and the frontiers of two foreign nations.

But today, with a crunch of gravel beneath speeding automobile wheels and the clang of a heavy gate on the fringe of the chateau grounds, their long loneliness ended.

It was at 1:40 p.m., (8:40 a.m., E. D.T.) that the Duke, almost hidden by luggage in the back seat of Mrs. Simpson's luxurious limousine, sped through the gates of the chateau.

COMES BAG AND BAGGAGE

Over 150 miles of winding road through the beautiful and historic chateau country of France he sped for his reunion with the American woman without whose love and companionship he had found it impossible to carry on as King.

A solid block of newspaper reporters, photographers, French gandarmes and special detectives had massed outside the gates when the duke's car approached.

It was followed by a convoy of five other cars containing detectives, servants, the duke's personal aides and luggage.

A few seconds before the cavalcade appeared, the heavy iron gates opened. With a roar of motors, the cars sped through the gates and up the winding tree-arched drive to the chateau.

Duke Kisses Wally In Joyous Reunion

SHE NESTLES IN HIS ARMS

No histrionics, no theatrical display of emotion marked their first meeting.

Mrs. Simpson dashed from the doorway to meet him and the cry: "Hello there!" sprang from her lips.

And to this the duke, arms outstretched for what a second later was to become a tender embrace, could only cry:

"Wallis!"

Then came a scene of laughter and gay amenities as the host and hostess of the sixteenth century castle, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bedeaux of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Hermann L. Rogers, former hosts to Mrs. Simpson on the Riviera, came running out to greet the man who, in history's most dramatic abdication, immortalized the expression "at long last."

"Hello, Hermann! Hello, Katherine!" the duke called out to Mr. and Mrs. Rogers.

SHE CLINGS TO HIM

With Mrs. Simpson clinging tenderly to his arm, he was then presented to Bedeaux and the latter's wife for the first time.

He thanked both the Rogers and the Bedeauxs for the hospitality they had extended to Mrs. Simpson during the many weary months of waiting, and then the party entered the chateau, scene during the last 24 hours of feverish preparations for the duke's arrival.

Cameramen, some of them even perched in trees, had sought to snap pictures of the duke from all angles as he entered the grounds of the chateau. But the former king, seen in one fleeting glimpse to smile as his journey ended, was scarcely visible.

The chateau furnished an incomparable scene of pastoral beauty for the first meeting of the duke and Mrs. Simpson since she left England just prior to his abdication.

It was on the evening of December 3, 1936, that Mrs. Simpson rushed to Cannes, France, to escape the limelight of publicity in England. And until today that was the last the ex-king had seen of her.

In the gardens there was a profusion of flowers. Birds of brilliant plumage were everywhere.

WALLY MAKES READY

In sharp contrast to this soft beauty was a detachment of six heavily armed special policemen who accompanied the duke's car on motorcycles. They dashed through the chateau gates after his limousine, and the officers took up posts to ward off curiosity-seekers or trouble-makers.

Impatient as the hour drew near for his arrival and for their first trembling meeting after six months of separation, the American beauty who shook an empire to its foundations busied herself with little preparations she knew would please the man she is soon to marry.

With changed license plates in an effort to ward off pursuit, the car, sent by Mrs. Simpson, left the ancient and romantic Chateau de Cande at 3:25 for Verneuil L'Etang, where the former British monarch alighted from the Arlberg Express.

WEDDING PLANS

Mrs. Simpson waited quietly inside the chateau. She did not emerge when her spokesman and former Riviera host, Herman Rogers, met 40 news correspondents clustered on the lawn 200 yards from the estate to witness the greeting that added another chapter to the world's most discussed romance.

Rogers, who appeared at 10:15 a. m., agreed to meet the press twice daily during the time the duke and Mrs. Simpson are here at the chateau, where they will probably be married a few weeks after the coronation of the duke's brother, King George VI, in London.

He had said the duke would enter the chateau by the front gate, and added pleadingly:

"Make it as easy as you can for him, boys."

In a written statement, Rogers had explained:

"The Duke of Windsor will arrive at the Chateau de Cande today at lunch time. He will come directly to the chateau. He will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bedaux, for at least several days.

IN ROMANTIC SETTING

"Sometime after the arrival of the duke, an announcement will be made of plans which are still to be discussed."

But the formal statement, couched in business-like, almost diplomatic terms, could not dispel the air of romantic expectancy that pervaded the aged chateau, in centuries past the home of French friars.

The excitement was illustrated by little things—by the lights that kept burning in the chateau until 4:30 a. m., by the sudden departure of Mrs. Simpson's car that roared away into the night followed frantically by a small station wagon, undoubtedly dispatched to carry the duke's luggage.

Earlier in the evening there was a mysterious breakdown that put all telephones in Monts out of touch with nearby towns. It was found later both direct telephone lines between Tours and Monts, as well as the telegraph wire, had been cut. Service was restored early this morning.

HEART TO HEART

An elegantly furnished salon in the chateau's east wing will probably be this scene of the couple's first heart to heart talk since he abdicated his throne and she left England on a hurried dash that did not cease until she had found a retreat near Cannes.

Here the Duke of Windsor and the woman of his choice will really see each other alone—for the first time in nearly six months, without attendants and after their hosts and friends at the chateau discreetly disappear.

Duke Skirls Bride March on Bagpipe

Vienna, May 4 (INS)—Before departing on his romantic journey from St. Wolfgang to France, the Duke of Windsor composed a wedding march which he had played every night for the past two weeks on his bagpipes, it was revealed today.

The duke dedicated the composition to Mrs. Wallis Simpson and claimed it was far superior to one he composed two years ago, entitled "Mallorca."

'WALLIS!' HIS ONLY WORD

Edward Hour Late; Wally Walks Nervously

Mont, France, May 4 (AP)—Edward, Duke of Windsor, was reunited in the moss-covered Castle de Cande today with the woman for whom he renounced a nempire, Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Five months and one day of enforced loneliness for the former King Edward VIII ended at 1:45 p. m. (8:45 a. m., Eastern daylight time), when the gay Duke reached the ancient chateau.

OLD LADY'S HONOR

At the entrance lodge, the old lady of the gateway had put on a bonnet of touraine lace for the gala day. For two hours she had been standing, almost motionless, waiting to open the portals.

"This," said the old lady with a shrug, "is a thing I rarely do—put on my bonnet. But—it is a memorable day!"

Within the mossy chateau, its great rooms gay with masses of lilacs, tulips and yellow acacia, a small house party had waited luncheon for Edward.

But Mrs. Simpson had been unable to stay inside. During the morning she walked in the garden, alone.

The day started out grey and chilly, but an hour before the duke arrived the sun burst out to show the countryside in all its splendor.

Wearing sabots, the peasants climbed from bicycles and chatted with the gendarmes. Then they whiled away the time munching chocolate and bread and sipping from flagons of white wine.

BOX OF JEWELS

As the Duke's car passed, every English newspaperman removed his hat.

His sun-tanned face was a picture of boyish happiness as he left the car at the chateau door and embraced the woman for whom he had waited so long.

Only yesterday, she won her final freedom from her second marriage —that to Ernest Aldrich Simpson, London shops' broker. He marriage to the Duke will follow—probably late this month or in June.

With Edward when he reached the chateau was a mysterious steel box, believed to contain jewelry.

There was a box of edelweiss, the white flower that grows on the lonely Alpine crags that the duke has climbed in his 22 weeks of self-exile; and—likewise for Mrs. Simpson—a colorful dirndl, the Austrian peasant woman's garb.

Gowns for a Duchess

Evening Gown by Schiaparelli

Here are two of the charming dresses chosen by Mrs. Wallis Simpson for her trousseau. They are by Schiaparelli and were selected among many others in Paris. ## Wally's Lavish Gowns

Trousseau Fashioned By Paris Makers

All the artistry of Parisian designers has been invoked to create for Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, soon to be the Duchess of Windsor, a trousseau befitting her Cinderella-like romance.

While plans for the wedding have proceeded apace, behind closed doors in the studios of world-renowned modistes in Paris designers have been busy selecting materials, blending colors, cutting and fitting garments—chosen from the loveliest the world has to offer.

Major contributions to this regal wardrobe are the creations of Schiaparelli and Mainbocher, two of Paris' most famous.

DRESSES FOR DAYTIME

Schiaparelli's contribution, three evening gowns, two dinner dresses and 11 costumes for afternoon or sports wear, presents the Duchess-to-be with her most appealing color, blue.

First, a high necked evening gown, of pale blue crepe, trailing to the floor, with an overdrape of cerise crepe, and kid belt done in gold.

Then another evening gown of navy crepe, with a fishnet sheer coat, featuring puffed elbow-length sleeves. The third evening gown is white mousseline, with an enormous red figure down the front.

One dinner dress is of carbon blue silk, worn with a jacket with bordered lapels and white leather scrolls. The other is fashioned from black wool net, flaring at the knees, the high neck trimmed in paillette flowers.

HER FAVORITE BLUE

Daytime ensembles include a black wool suit, a brown wool jersey dress, with sky-blue tweed jacket; a dress of heavy black silk and another tweed jacket; afternoon dresses of black silk, black crepe, a wine-colored wool dress and two carbon-blue dresses.

More exotic is Mainbocher's first evening dress, a printed Persian creation of violet crepe. The jacket has puffed sleeves, the petticoat is of ruffled, violet taffeta.

Duke Reads Coronation Article

Verneuil, France, May 4 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor, who arrived here on his dash to meet Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, rose early on the train, donned the same gray suit he wore yesterday and touched off his costume with a new, blue necktie he had bought in Austria.

Wally 'Forgotten Woman'

MAYFAIR SHUNS HER NAME, RAPS EX-KING

(Editor's Note—How London society hostesses, struggling to orient themselves to changed conditions under the conservative reign of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, have "forgotten the name of Simpson" is amazingly described today by Dorothy Kilgallen in another of her reports on London's pre-coronation activities.

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service.

London, May 4—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, soon to become the Duchess of Windsor, today is the forgotten woman of London society.

A few months ago fashionable Mayfair hostesses fought and schemed to get on Mrs. Simpson's guest lists. To be invited to dine at Wally's home in Cumberland terrace was a social triumph. It meant belonging to the "King's set."

But Wally, who was welcomed by Mayfair society as the King's favorite, was outcast as the ex-King's fiancee. Nothing is as dead, socially, as yesterday's King.

It is amusing now to talk to society women, including members of the nobility, who have suddenly forgotten the name of Simpson.

"Well, of course," she said, "I didn't know her socially."

Yet, before the abdication, this same woman was bitterly disappointed to be left off the guest list of one of Wally's cocktail parties. She was only one of a dozen women who gave the same reply.

They all "never knew her socially," or "only slightly," or "just met her casually once or twice."

The social worm has turned and London's smart set is still playing "follow the leader"—but there is a different leader now and everyone is pretending they never played the old game with Edward.

It is quite funny to a casual observer and perhaps would be funny to Wallis if she could see her old friends and hear them say politely:

"Wally? Oh, you mean that Simpson woman! A terrible mess, wasn't it?"—and change the subject.

RELIGION CALLED COMMUNISM "CURE"

JESUIT SEES NO U. S. PERIL

Religion can save America from Communism and Fascism and preserve American democracy, according to the Rev. John A. LaFarge, distinguished Jesuit authority, in a lecture on "Religion and the American Democracy," for the benefit of the Jones L. Corrigan, S. J., Memorial Fund at Symphony Hall.

"Through religion's solution of the essential crux of the social problems, we possess the charter for that organic representation and collaboration, which, in my opinion, is necessary for the preservation of democracy," declared Father LaFarge, whose great great grandfather was Benjamin Franklin and who also includes John Barry, father of the American navy as an ancestor.

"Whether America will go Communist or Facist, is not for me to say. I am no prophet. But America does not need to go either Communist or Facist unless she so desires. She has followed the path of democracy in the past and there is no reason why she shall not follow it in the future and provide equality of opportunity for all according to their gifts.

TO CREATE EQUALITY

"But democracy does not create or perpetuate itself. With the changes in our country's condition and the changes in the world's condition. Equality of opportunity no longer can be entrusted to chance or to the ruthless stimulant of free unhindered competition.

"This equality must be created and to create it a new organism is needed, not a political but a social and economic organism, founded on the adequate representation of all regions, groups, classes, occupations and persons in our vast country in local and national bodies.

"Such an organization is to be truly democratic as long as it is entirely voluntary through protected and co-ordinated, and if need be, sanctioned by the state.

"TWO INSEPARABLE"

"Religion alone can solve the crucial problems of justice, charity and reconciliation of the personal with the social, that such an organization as democracy itself postulates. Hence religion and democracy are inseparable, and the natural corollary ensuses that if we wish to preserve Americanism and democracy, we must restore religion to its rightful place in our daily lives and in the educational system of this country."

Father LaFarge said that he expected the development of such an organization would take years and could only be accomplished if people in different parts of the country, in different classes had a contact of minds and understood the needs of each other.

"A start toward such a contact can be made by personal endeavor. The more definite these contacts are placed on a spiritual basis, not on a mere enthusiasm of self interest, the more fruitful they will be. They will be the first move toward an active democracy and a positive refutation of the false dilemma of choice between Communism and Facism.

PAULA STONE FRED STONE

Stage and screen veteran Fred Stone and his screen actress daughter Paula were among 400 guests who frolicked at the circus motif party at the home of Miss Marion Davies, paying tribute to William Randolph Hearst on his birthday anniversary.

London to Toast King With Beer

AMERICAN GIRLS TO STAGE BIG FLOOR SHOW

No less than 250,000 extra barrels of beer, by a conservative estimate, will be consumed before the Coronation is over, and the leading hotels have stocked up heavily with champagne, wines and liqueurs.

The famous old toast of "God Save the King" is going to be drunk from one end of London to the other, by dowagers, debutantes, workmen, soldiers and even visitors from the South Sea Islands.

London night life undoubtedly will get a real boost by the Coronation, and although the night spots took a long time to catch on, they now are nothing to be sniffed at.

The city's first "floor show" opened in war days; it failed. It took American chorus girls to put over the "floor show" idea, and they still work here in large numbers. For the Coronation, enough American singers, dancers and musicians have been imported to make a New Yorker feel at home.

The expected 2,000,000 Coronation visitors will have at least two nights of extreme gaiety. At midnight, May 11, as Coronation Day begins, bedlam will break loose, with trumpets and horns blowing and everybody yelling. The night of May 12, after the King is crowned, will top the extravaganza of letting the hairs down.

River parties on the Thomas—on large ocean and cruising liners and on private craft—will give the finishing touch.

Licensing laws for liquor will interfere to a certain extent with the night spots. Drinks may be served in restaurants and cabarets only up to a certain hour—usually midnight—unless special permission has been obtained.

But London has got around that through the so-called "night clubs" or "bottle-party clubs," where the word "club" is taken more literally than in that usage in America. Visitors to those clubs must "join" for a nominal fee—usually about $1 to $2.50.

The visitor signs forms which permit the club, as agent, to obtain liquor by the bottle from merchants. The bottles are labeled with the customer's name, placed on the table as his property and kept—if necessary—until the customer comes back a second or third time to finish off the contents.

By the same theory, the customer doesn't get any liquor until at least the night after he signs up, to give the club a chance to send out for the bottled goods.

Hosses Have a Good Time

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Last time we were in London was 1926 when Prince Eddie was being nursed along like a peach orchard in a frost. Eddie gave the crown up for a girl. Carol of Rumania has a better arrangement than that. He gives nothing up. They've got to give up to Carol.

The Lord Chamberlain touches the golden spurs to the King's heels and jumps away quick. He is girded with a sword, invested with the ring, the royal sceptre, the glove, and the sceptre and dove. That's doing your Christmas shopping early.

Then they crown him with the rim of the golden derby. Up until this time they have done everything to George VI that he ever did to a cornerstone except slap him in the face with a trowel of mortar.

After that there is a tremendous shout and the Goldstream Guards dash up, hose, foot and guns. They dash away again by request.

HUB DOCTOR IN AIR DASH AROUND GLOBE

Dr. Reginald D. Margeson, Back Bay surgeon, left East Boston airport today on the first leg of a flying trip around the world by scheduled air lines, according to word received here.

The Commonwealth avenue physician took off at 7:20 from here for Newark and then left there at 8:22 a. m. for Cleveland. He expects to be back in Boston in about 19 days, returning to the United States in the zeppelin Hindenburg.

If Mr. Margeson can follow his 19-day itinerary, he will be the first person to take a round-the-world flight by scheduled air lines without using any other means of transportation.

The physician expects to be back in Boston in 18 days, 21 hours and 28 minutes, seven hours longer than the record of H. R. Ekins, newspaper reporter.

The doctor's tentative route is to San Francisco, where he will leave tomorrow; Honolulu, Thursday; Midway Island, Friday; Wake Island, Saturday, Sunday (one day because of loss of 24 hours at international date line); Guam, Monday; Manila, Tuesday.

Then Hongkong, Wednes. Thurs day; Tourane or Hue, Friday; Penang, Saturday; Rangoon, Sunday (May 16); Jodhpur, Monday; Bardad, Tuesday; Athens, Wednesday; Amsterdam, Thursday; Frankfort, Friday; aboard Hindenburg, Saturday, Sunday (May 22, 23); Monday, Lakehurst, N. J., and Boston.

Although 20 calendar days elapse, the trip will actually take 19 days to complete the journey because he loses a day at the international date line.

HISTORIC BATON GIVEN KING

London, May 4 (AP) — King George VI received his baton as a field marshal today in accoleful prelude to the coronation ceremonies. Seven field marshals witnessed the presentation.

This was the date of his accession to the throne after the abdication of Edward VIII.

The elaborately etched baton, 22 inches long, is covered with red velvet embroidered with eight rings of gold lions. It is crowned with a chased gold mount with a wreath of rose, shamrock and thistle and figures of St. George and the dragon. The lower end is similarly mounted.

Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mother Mary and the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose joined the sovereign later when he presented colors to the King's company of the Grenadier Guards, a pre-coronation ceremony performed by every British monarch since Charles II.

The Brighter Side

—By DAMON RUNYON—

Damon Runyon

We have been telling our friends the burlesque boys for some time that those horrible jokes would sooner or later get them in trouble.

It was our fear that the trouble would take the form of a lynching bee. We were pretty sure that some night an outraged public would rise in wrath after a succession of those jokes, and start stringing the burlesque comics to the neon lights along Broadway, and maybe use blow torches on the producers.

To tell the truth, we had a notion to lead a party against a bunch of burlesque comics who popped up in Miami Beach last winter with the most frightful collection of dirty jokes that these somewhat weather-beaten ears have ever heard.

We glanced about the theater looking for possible volunteers for our enterprise, and beheld Mr. Lou Davis, a celebrated man-about-Broadway, dozing in the front row. We went over and shook Mr. Davis awake, and broached our punitive proposition to him, and Mr. Davis yawned and said,

"I'm in favor of lynching them for those dirty jokes all right, but because the jokes are dirty, but because they are so dull."

Then Mr. Davis went back to sleep.

Once, Too Often

Now the authorities of New York city have closed up the burlesque houses of the big town, and while most persons seem to take it for granted that the action was due largely to the "strip tease," we are inclined to think that some of the authorities must have heard that limburger cheese sketch once too often.

In any event, the burlesque boys have only themselves to blame for their predicament. They got altogether too rough. They had the closing coming to them. We have no sympathy for the producers, but we are sorry for the 600 men and women who have been thrown out of work in New York. After all, they are not to blame for the stupidity of their employers.

For a long time the burlesque business was pretty well organized and directed under a sort of central government, and for that period it made a great point of keeping itself clean. The fellow who ran it then were smart enough to know that their business had a bad name to live down.

Burlesque then was often good entertainment, and it produced some great performers. Then a lot of kinks got into the game, and the organization fell apart, and burlesque drifted back to evil.

Hogs for Nudity

The klucks went in whole hog for nudity, and filth. The so-called "strip-tease" was once rather a legitimate bit of business, performed by young ladies with a certain sense of artistry, and something to show. Several of them have even gone on to taking off their clothes in more refined surroundings, and have been written up in the slick paper magazines as quite remarkable persons.

The klucks make of the old "strip," just a vulgar shedding of garments, and too often by ladies who by rights should appear in public only when wearing the most voluminous gowns. This type of lady actually removes from the "strip," not only the artistry, but all of the excitement.

The last "stripper" we saw in action was alone sufficient excuse to close up all the burlesque houses in the country.

However, we cannot get up any great amount of enthusiasm over this sudden moral outburst on the part of the New York authorities. It is somewhat belated.

The conditions in the burlesque houses on which the closing order is based, have prevailed for several years right under the snoots of our mayor, our police commissioner, our license commissioner, and the church people who finally got around to letting out the squawk that produced action.

These conditions were no different the day the closing order was issued than they were a year ago—two years ago. But we do not recall hearing in that period any moral burblings from any of the gentlemen who could have expunged the whole situation in the bat of an eye.

Two-Way Artist

We are pretty sure that in the course of time they will get around to everything. Eventually they may catch up with those so-called society artists who sing, or rather recite, "sophisticated" ditties in the high class night clubs of the East Side.

"Sophisticated" in this connection, means dirt disguised in double entendre. That is to say, it may be taken two ways, and the society artist can claim it certain that it will be taken the way he, or she, intends, which is the dirty way.

There is practically nothing that can be said in extenuation of burlesque as it has been conducted of late years. But in burlesque they at least come right out and say what they mean in words of four letters.

They do not attempt to hide their dirt under rhymes chanted to piano accompaniment, and with eye-rollings, and smirks, and pauses, and gestures that leave no doubt as to the purport in the minds of even the nitwits who find this form of filth very, very amusing.

CAPE REPORTS TAUTOG RUN IS STARTED

News from the Cape: The tautog are already running in Buzzard's Bay.

A resident of Marion reported catching eight on Sunday, running up to eight pounds.

Biggest boom to the Massachusetts angler this week was the opening of the trout ponds Saturday in nine state forests. These ponds recently stocked by the state Conservation Department, contain squaretail, browns and rainbow trout; are open only to fly-fishermen, and that only by special permit from the local wardens.

More than 500 are estimated to have thronged the banks of Frye pond and Berry pond in the Harold Parker state forest near Andover, where more than 800 trout between 10 and 14 inches were taken on the first day of fishing.

At 1 p. m. Saturday a check made of anglers at Frye pond and Berry pond lines being cast, but than 25 had taken the limit of five fish by that time. Wardens reported more rainbow than any other variety of trout being taken. The most popular lures were red and white bucktails.

All that the park needed to look like Revere beach on a hot Sunday afternoon was a roller-coaster, hot-dog stands and the traffic cops.

* * *

For-What-It's-Worth-Note: Two four and one-half-pound rainbow were taken Saturday from Pleasant Lake at Elkins, N. H., and two five-pound salmon, among other catches, according to Stanley Hallett, employe of a Boston brokerage house.

All were taken on smelt, said Hallett.

* * *

Yesterday's record temperature for the year has greatly increased the demand for reservations on the B. & M. fish train special to Sebago Lake this Saturday.

Smelt are running in the Songo river. Ice is practically clear over the entire lake, and many salmon were reported this last weekend.

Sportsmen who wish to make this special fishing trip this weekend would do well to get reservations in early. The trip is limited to 85, costs $13.15 for the entire weekend, including transportation, lodging, meals, fishing license and boat rental, and train leaves North Station Saturday noon. It returns Sunday night.

* * *

Ice went out on the Newfound Lake in New Hampshire, April 30. Anglers lined the banks of Swift River in that state over Sunday, with small catches reported.

* * *

Several fishing parties to New Brunswick are being planned this weekend, among them that of Grant Pierce of Providence, who will meet Arthur Fels at Portland, Me., and drive up to the Tabusintac River.

A party of three reported taking 63 salmon there last week. They are E. Frank Bugbee, C. Donald Bartlett and Albert W. French of Willimantic, Ct.

Bugbee caught a 25 pounder Monday of last week; a salmon weighing just over 20 pounds Tuesday, and a 17-pounder Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ream of Providence took 14 salmon each last Tuesday. Mrs. Ream catching the largest fish, a 16-pounder.

In five days fishing last week, 106 salmon were reported caught in the Tabusintac.

* * *

American Writer Sees Dublin Calm at Coup

years has thinned down to signing the bills passed by the Dail and such politico-social matters as receiving credentials from foreign ministers. This latter prerogative, too, died when the late Mr. McDowell, envoy of the U. S., presented his credentials directly to the Irish President and created a precedent which has been since followed by every foreign minister accredited to the Irish nation.

So on December 10 the first of the above-mentioned bills abolished the governor-general's office and substituted the speaker of the Dail as the person to sign bills in his place. Thus, since December, Ireland has had a Parliament of one house with an executive of nebulous powers, who was president not of the Irish people but of the "executive council," according to the old constitution's definition.

What the new constitution does is to create a legislative group consisting of the President, the Dail and a Senate, which is entirely new in character and function. Under the new system the President of Eire (the old term "Saorstat Eirann," or Free State, is abolished from all Irish literature and official documents) will henceforth be elected by direct suffrage, as is and will be the Dail also. In other words, the Irish President will no longer be a figurehead such as the governor-general was in matters of state procedure, but will be endowed with full executive power "in consultation with a newly-created council of state."

DeValera Humor

Of course all people with any knowledge of recent Irish government action will enjoy the dry humor in the implication that President DeValera lacked either the initiative or audacity to enforce internal legislation under the rather loosely framed constitution in force since 1922. He required for Irish benefit the authority pretty much as it was required.

In effect, like cuts the Fourteenth "he is the state."

The function of the new council of state then will be largely of an inspirational or cerebral sort patterned on the lines of the British privy council which assists the throne in matters of political tact or policy. The only difference however, is that the British crown is a figurative force whereas the Irish president has become a strong administrative factor.

In other words, the president's only obligation is to listen, and the council will be a sort of congregation of Irish elders in three categories of persons.

These will consist of (1) ex-officio members such as the prime minister, who is called the taoiseach, the chief justice or tanaiste and four other key officers of the government; (2) any person who has held at any previous time any of the above positions and (3) any persons up to the number of seven whom the president wishes to appoint.

No. 1 Man Passes

One of the most interesting features in the administrative section of the constitution is the item stating that the president will take precedence or be the No. 1 citizen of the state.

The necessity for such a definition may be confusing to the people of the United States, accustomed as they are to regard the presidency as automatically implying precedence, but in the previous Irish constitution framed with "diplomatic" delicacy" the Irish president's social position was made a rather "vaporish" one.

Technically, under the old order, the governor-general was the No. 1 man and functional leader, though in late years he was gradually eased to lower levels and virtually lost in social oblivion. Something official was needed to fix the chief executive's rank so Article 12 was inserted starring crisply:

"There shall be a president of Eire (uachtaran na heireann) hereinafter called the president who shall take precedence over all other persons of the state."

The item has the ring of Genesis. Now there is a blending of political, religious and social significance in this which all native-born Irishmen will recognize. For example, the Royal Dublin Society, which promotes the horse show each August, also the spring exhibition which is now in progress, embraces an all-Ireland membership without any frontier divisions between North and South. So does the Royal Irish Academy, a cultural body, and so do all religious groups.

Thus in matters where there may be mixtures of social strata or creeds, the position of the president has been firmly and finally fixed.

The principal power the new constitution gives the president which the former governor-general did not enjoy includes the right to withhold sanction on bills under discretionary circumstances and to refer them to the supreme court for interpretations on constitutional validity of the people by referendum.

Give Lie to 'Dictator'

There are of course terms specified on the exercises of his prerogatives which would prevent unlimited authority, as the Dublin Evening Mail, a former anti-home rule paper, remarked in Saturday's issue. These provisions seem to give the lie to the notion which prevailed that the ceremonial head of the state is a dictator of sorts, a kind of minor Mussolini."

The other innovation in the administrative end of the document is the senate. The former senate abolished last year after its rejection of the uniforms or the "blue shirt" bill which prohibited the wearing of political regalia, will be replaced by a senate elected on a "vocational basis."

This senate will consist of 60 members as did the old, but instead of being elected by joint vote of the Dail as formerly, 11 Senators will be designated by the Prime Minister, three by the University of Dublin, three by the National University and 43 from panels of candidates voted on by both the Dail and any defeated person who has stood for the office of deputy and polled more than 500 votes. It is a curiously complex arrangement confusing to the lay mind and a target for the opposition newspapers which seem satisfied with sarcasms rather than editorial screams.

The "vocational flavor" of the senate comes from the fact that senators will presumably be selected from people having a diversified background and so will form a sort of economic "jury" familiar with intricacies of Irish industry. The senate admittedly will be an experimental body which may or may not survive the three years allotted for rephrasing legalisms in the constitution.

The one remaining organic change is the reintroduction of a referendum. There was a referendum in the original 1922 constitution, but one that was abolished abruptly by the Fianna Fail government some years ago after Mr. De Valera obtained 75,000 signatures to a petition to have the "oath of allegiance to the king" submitted to a vote of the people. The petition at the time was thought tactless.

Of course, the new constitution cannot be enforced until it is enacted by the Irish people in the plebiscite to be taken on the same day as the general elections this summer, and then after it becomes operative, which is taken for granted there will be a three-year period during which minor amendments of a "clarifying nature" can be made by the Dail without recourse to the people. During this period nothing of vital importance may be altered.

Dublin Serene

Life in Dublin moves serenely on today with only casual conversations about the constitution in the restaurants, the shops and the curbstones.

Folk seem more concerned with the sweeps drawings and the current commonsense of workaday life. President DeValera, and the leader of the opposition party, Mr. William Cosgrave, have held themselves incommunicado and refused to amplify their first official statements pro and con. The press quarters in the Dail largely "anti," were filled with pinochle and bridge playing reporters while Dail members were receiving the usual daily delegations of potato beet and corn crop farmers.

Dublin and behind Dublin in the meadows and hills, folk were busy with the ordinances of the day; to them the new constitution was only another and milder episode in the quick shifting of Irish history which has passed under Irish noses with such rapidity that now it requires something emotionally terrific to stir the native Gael. He has seen too much excitement parade past to be emotional over the rumbles of legislative machinery grinding out new laws.

BUT WE BOTH KNEW MY PARTY WAS A FAILURE

I wanted so much to do something nice for Bob—so I invited all the boys over for a steag party one night. I worked all afternoon fixing fancy little sandwiches for them.

I was so proud of my refreshments—but the only thing they seemed to like was the coffee. They just nibbled and dabbled. They were very polite about it, but I could have cried. I'd tried so hard.

"No use kidding myself," I said to Bob the next morning. "My party was a fizzle... but why?" He grinned and said—"Well, maybe one of the reasons is it wasn't a stag—those sandwiches—too fancy and the bread wasn't the usual kind."

Well, we had another party last night—with great slabs of cheese and substantial Bond Bread. How those men went to work! I learned my lesson... when feeding he-men, give them he-man food—and Bond is the he-man bread.

Girl Writer on Screen

Ann Marsters in New Film Cast

Hollywood, Cal., May 4—Officials of the Paramount Studios today confirmed the report broadcast by Walter Winchell that Ann Marsters, girl feature writer of the Boston Evening American, had been cast for the role of a girl reporter in the new motion picture, "Exclusive," a drama of newspaper life.

Winchell broke the news of the engagement of Miss Marsters in his nation-wide radio broadcast Sunday and in his syndicated newspaper column Monday. Today at the office of C. J. Dunphy, publicity director of Paramount productions, it was stated Miss Marsters had been added to the cast which is headed by Fred McMurray, Charles Ruggles, Frances Farmer, Lloyd Nolan and Edward H. Robins.

The picture is to be directed by another Bostonian, Alexander Hall, who was born in Charlestown.

The story was written by Jack Moffitt, former Kansas City newspaperman, and among the settings is a newspaper city room, which Paramount executives predict will be accepted by newspapermen as the most authentic appearing editorial room ever to have been shown in motion pictures.

Miss Marsters explained her latest venture as being only a part of her general newspaper experience and is to be used as part of a new Hollywood series she will write for the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Baby in Zipper Bag Just Stage Dummy

New York, May 4 (AP)—This is a story of the case of "the baby in the black zipper bag."

The bag was carried by a mysterious-looking man. The baby's cries were heard, emanating from the bag, as the man waited for a subway train.

Somebody called police but, before they arrived, the man boarded a train and had gone.

Then followed radio alarms and pursuit by detectives, who finally overtook him.

"What have you got in that bag?" demanded Detective Joseph Piazza. "Come on, open it up."

Inside was a doll. Piazza and an aide were not satisfied. They jiggled the doll. There was no cry, no sound at all.

"Oh," said the man, identified by now as Thomas L. Meister, "I'm a ventriloquist. Someone must have seen me on that subway platform. I just stopped for a moment of practice."

Hoover Will Aid Coast Exposition

San Francisco, May 4 (AP)—Golden Gate International Exposition officials announced today former President Herbert Hoover will aid in planning a mining industry exhibit for the 1939 exposition.

POPE IN DEMAND FOR FREE REIN IN GERMANY

Vatican City, May 4 (AP)—Pope Pius XI told Adolf Hitler today that the Catholic church must be left free to fulfill its mission in Nazi Germany.

The Pontiff's reply to the recent German church note, which itself was a reply to the Pope's pre-Easter encyclical accusing the German government of violating the 1933 church-state concordat, was delivered by Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli to the German ambassador to the Holy See, Diego Von Bergen.

Vatican sources said the note did not mention Hitler's May Day speech, when he warned against sermons or "encyclicals" which "disturb" the Third Reich.

It took a more moderate tone than the encyclical, and left the way open for further conversations about the concordat, which set up separate spheres of church and state influence in the Reich.

The note maintained however, the church's insistance that economic pressure must not be brought to bear against Catholics in Germany; that Catholic schools and the Catholic press should not be hampered.

As the note was presented, German Foreign Minister Konstantin Von Neurath, who is here visiting Premier Mussolini, drove with German Ambassador to Italy, Ulrich Von Hassel, to Castel Gandolfo, where the Pope is in residence.

He did not see the Holy Father, however, and authoritative German sources said there was no possibility he would meet either Pope Pius or Cardinal Pacelli.

SPEED TO SAVE BILBAO WOMEN

St. Jean De Luz, France, May 4 (AP)—Refuge for about 10,000 women and children from siege or bombardment in Bilbao was virtually assured today as a fleet of passenger liners raced to evacuate as many as possible before insurgent guns close the port.

Bilbao's Basque defenders fought a last-ditch fight but insurgent dispatches said General Emilio Mola's troops were swarming into mountainous region north of Bilbao and that their artillery already commanded the Nedvion River, Bilbao's outlet to the Bay of Biscay.

More than 4000 refugees, many children among them, were listed to sail tonight aboard the 10,000-ton Spanish liner Habana, the first mass migration from the harrassed city.

PARIS—The French Statue of Liberty for the first time today faced toward her famous American sister.

Paris officials . . . decided to turn the fifty-eight-foot bronze around as a delicate French gesture of friendship so that Miss Liberty would no longer give the cold shoulder to the United States.

Workmen, using a sixty-foot pine tree as a lever between the statue's lamp arm and head, pried it around to face henceforth toward her sister across the sea.

MLLE. LIBERTY'S about-face symbolizes a great deal of the news that comes to us from Europe these days. It seems that the French and British have broken out with a new fever of friendship for the United States. They are so anxious to impress us with their friendly feelings that their statesmen have repeatedly, if vaguely, alluded to proposals they may make about the payment of the debts they owe us.

Times certainly have changed from the debt-tense days when a visitor to Paris wearing shell-rimmed eyeglasses, a straw hat or an American-cut suit, was likely to be pursued through the streets by young men yelling: "A bas, Smoot! A bas, Smoot! A bas, Sheeloke Americain!"

The reason for the change is not at all hard to find. William Bird, veteran correspondent of The New York Sun, put it succinctly after a recent tour through Europe:

"No nation, no individual in a position of responsibility in Europe, really desires war . . . Yet I find that a majority of the people to whom I have talked in ten European capitals believe that, if things continue as they are now going, a general European war is inevitable, and that it will come within a comparatively short time, many say 1938."

EXPERTS differ about how the war will come. Some think that Mussolini simply will spring at Great Britain, and touch off a general explosion. Others believe that Spain, the current battlefield, eventually will not be able to hold the war being fought there, and that the combatants will spread out all over the Continent.

A few of the closest students of European affairs predict that Germany's conquest of a trade empire that now extends from Hamburg through the Balkans and Turkey, all the way to Bagdad, is certain to provoke Great Britain into a fight for dominance, with the French lining up against Germany in self-defense.

But how the war will come is relatively unimportant. The important thing is that the French and British are convinced that they are elected as participants, and, feeling that way about it, they are beginning to make the preliminary arrangements.

The most important of all preliminary arrangements is to hit upon a way of financing a war. Some way will be found—some way always has, whenever peoples decided war was inevitable—but the easiest way, from the Franco-British point of view, is to call on an experienced financier in such matters—viz., Uncle Sam.

Hence the new fever of friendship, the coy remarks about the possibility of paying the last war debts.

VERY OBVIOUSLY, our allies believe that some sort of partial settlement of what is owing from the last war may serve as a sort of retainer on Uncle Sam's services as financier for the next war. They know, of course, that the Johnson Act prohibits loans to nations in default on war debts.

But apparently they feel that if the few hundreds of millions past due from individual nations, on the total of nearly $13,000,000,000 which Europe owes the United States, are paid up to date, some kind of promise of future loans can be won. Their statements and attitudes clearly demonstrate this belief.

Now, before this fever of friendship grows to a white heat that may produce painful misunderstandings, is the time for our Government to make clear that if France and Great Britain wish to pay up, that will be very nice indeed, but they can expect no new loans, as a result. We ought to tell them in so many words—words impossible of misunderstanding—that we do not intend to finance any more foreign wars.

IF WE accept payment and, in return, hold out hope of future loans, we shall simply be making our own preliminary arrangements for participation in the next war.

In such an event, we shall see every sequence of the story of 1914-1918 re-enacted. The same old story. The nations now soliciting our friendship, and our dollars, are lined up against what? That's right—against dictatorships. What are they getting ready to ask us to do? Right again—to "save the world for democracy!"

No, thank you.

Lal, Science Writer, Is Pulitzer Winner

New York, May 4 (US)—G. B. Lal, science writer of Universal Service, has been named co-winner with four other science writers of the 1936 Pulitzer prize for distinguished journalism.

Lal and his colleagues were awarded an equal share of a $1000 prize for their coverage of the Harvard University tercentenary last year. Those who were chosen with him were John J. O'Neil of the New York Herald-Tribune, William L. Laurence of the New York Times, David Dietz of the Scripps-Howard newspapers and Howard W. Blakeslee of the Associated Press.

Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia University School of Journalism made the presentations at the annual Pulitzer prize award dinner here. In making the award Dean Ackerman stated the prerequisites of winning it:

"For a distinguished example of reporter's work during the year, the test being strict accuracy, terseness, the preference being given to news stories prepared under pressure of edition time, that redound to the credit of the profession of journalism."

Lal, who is 44, holds degrees from the University of California and also attended post-graduate courses at Columbia University and British universities. He has traveled and done special research in England, Germany, Japan, Burma, China.

Other Pulitzer awards went to Margaret Mitchell, $1000, for the book "Gone With the Wind," the year's most distinguished novel; Moses Hart and George S. Kaufman for the winning play, "You Can't Take It With You."

Van Wyck Brooks, author of "Flowering of New England;" Allan Nevins, author of "Hamilton Fish, the Inner History of the Grant Administration" and Robert Frost, author of "A Further Range" also won awards in literature.

'Jobless Are Bums,' Says Gov. Hoffman

Philadelphia, May 4 (AP)—Governor Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, told the Philadelphia Safety Engineers' Club his state would spend $8,000,000 "to keep the unemployed unemployed, to maintain a lot of bums." He criticized last night the action of the New Jersey Legislature in diverting that amount from the highway fund to relief.

Miss Elizabeth Simpkins Cheney Announces Engagement

By BETTY ALDEN

THOUGH ELIZABETH SIMPKINS CHENEY, who is to be married soon to Thomas Crowell Taylor Buckley, lives in South Manchester, Connecticut, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Cheney, she is closely enough related to a number of Boston families to make the announcement of her engagement of interest . . .

Through her mother, she is a granddaughter of Dr. Gorham Bacon of Yarmouthport, and the late Mrs. Bacon (Elizabeth Simpkins) . . . and a great niece of Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. George R. Agassiz, John Simpkins and the late Nat Simpkins . . . these were all brothers and sisters of the late Mrs. Bacon . . . and through them the bride-to-be has a number of cousins, uncles and aunts in our midst . . .

MRS. WILLIAM FAVERSHAM, JR.

Her elder sister, Marjory, who is now Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., lives in Brookline, while another sister, Mrs. George P. Reynolds, and Dr. Reynolds, have taken a house at Yarmouthport in order to be near Dr. Bacon for the summer . . .

Cape Cod, especially the section around Dennis and Yarmouth, is a gathering place of the Cheney, Simpkins and Bacon clans during the summer months . . . in fact the Austin Cheneys spend the greater part of the season there . . .

Miss Cheney graduated from Miss Hall's School . . . her third sister is Miss Mabel A. Cheney of South Manchester . . .

Mr. Buckley, likewise, is not unknown to Bostonians . . . for his brother, Charles Brooks Buckley, was married in the autumn of '35 to Connie Crocker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Glover Crocker of Milton and Cohasset . . . At the time of that wedding the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Julian G. Buckley of Geneseo, loaned the bride an exquisite heirloom lace bridal veil from her treasure chest . . . a little gesture which she will likely repeat to enhance her next daughter-in-law as she walks to the altar . . . Needless to say the bridal gowns in the Cheney family are made of the silken fabrics for which the family is famous . . .

The prospective bridegroom prepared for college at St. George's School and was graduated from Harvard in 1932 . . . At college he rowed on the Jayvee crew in 1930 and was a member of the Harvard crew which rowed in the Henley regatta in 1931 . . .

Art Exhibit Opening Attracts Many

THE STAFF OF LIFE was on parade around the walls of the Bell and Fletcher Galleries yesterday afternoon . . . in the form of large wooden bas relief panels by Atanas Katchamakoff . . .

The series of panels, which are done in a modern manner . . . yet with the old-time skill and technique of the wood carver . . . depict the "Story of Bread," from the plowing of the soil, through the various stages of wheat raising . . . until the baker proudly takes the golden brown loaves from the oven . . .

The loaf of bread was a perfect choice of subject, for Artist Katchamakoff's panels are made from a light tan wood which is just the color of a well baked loaf of bread . . .

Examples of the artist's work, which are to be on exhibit at Bell and Fletcher's through May 27, also include sculptures in bronze, marble and wood, and a number of sculptured portraits of well known people . . . all done with an unusual strength and simplicity of line . . .

The exhibition opened with a sociable gathering at the gallery yesterday afternoon . . . with Mrs. William Faversham, Jr., and Mrs. Gideon K. de Forest heading a long list of hostesses . . . and a cheery little repast of sherry and crackers taking place of the usual afternoon tea . . .

Summery and Gay in Printed Gown

AMONG THE MANY ART LOVERS who dropped in to meet the artist and his wife, and view his works, were Mrs. Paul Clark, Jr., Mrs. Hamilton Davis, Mrs. T. Mitchell Hastings, Jr., who looked very summery and gay in a black dress printed with red poppies, and made with one of the new short swing skirts which rippled her about as she walked . . . her hat was a large coarse straw with an open crown and grosgrain streamers down the back . . .

Mrs. Alfred H. B. Peabody, sporting a Bermuda tan, and Mrs. Nicholas Danforth, inviting one and all of the T. Mott Shaw family to an informal party at her house, were others browsing around the rooms . . . Catherine Richardson and Mrs. William Penn Cresson, two Boston artists, dropped in to scrutinize the exhibit, while others on hand included Faith Barney and her sister, Mrs. Howard Slayman, Mrs. Wilder Wheelwright with her son Farley, and Mrs. Walter Gropius, who looked very charming in a stylish summer street outfit consisting of a black silk dress with a three-quarter swagger jacket of black and white polka dots, and a jaunty black sailor trimmed with white . . .

* * *

Although August seems quite distant to us right now, the committee for the Berkshire Music Festival is already hard at work on plans for this annual event which is a highlight of the summer season in the Berkshires . . . Mrs. Louis E. Underwood and Miss Elizabeth Gamwell, chairmen of the Pittsfield committee, gave a tea Sunday afternoon to gather the members of their committee together, to make plans for the six concerts which are to be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Dr. Serge Koussevitsky conducting .

Brookline Lecture

Though it has been a comparatively short time in history since Indian raids on New England villages were common occurrences and our fore-fathers carried firearms as regularly as we carry watches, we seldom think of Indians in New England today so Miss Mary Lee's lecture on "Indians Hereabouts" should prove most interesting.

Miss Lee will speak at the meeting of the Brookline Historical Society which will be held at the Edward Devotion House on Harvard street in Brookline on Wednesday evening, May 12.

Miss Lee is the author of the well-known novel, "It's a Great War" which was published several years ago. Among those who are planning to be present are Mrs. Arthur Williams, Mrs. Harrison C. Bridge, Mrs. Virgil C. Pond, Miss Harriet Alma Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. Leicester R. Potter, Mrs. Henry H. Richardson, Helen Driscoll, Mary Davis Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Luther M. Merrill, Miss Laura R. Little and Charles B. Dunklee.

Hart Directs Harvard Play

Nothing but the best for Harvard Dramatic Club's spring production, "The Dog Beneath the Skin," and so Francis R. Hart, Jr., direct from such Broadway success as "Be So Kindly," "Aged 25" and "Tide Rising," is in Cambridge as its producer-director.

"The Dog Beneath the Skin," if you don't already know, opens Friday night at the Copley Theater.

Producer-Director Hart, Harvard '27, was a prominent member of the dramatic club as an undergraduate. Previously, he had considerable experience with the famous Henry Jewett Company.

Since graduation, he has been associated with Macgowan and Reed, in various capacities, and has to his production credit, "Springtime for Henry" and "Gay Divorce."

His subsequent affiliations have been with the New York partnership, Aldrich and DeLiagre, later with Aldrich and Myers.

During his Boston street residence, Mr. Hart and the late Robert Williams produced "Criminal Code" in 1930, Patrons of The Stagers' production may recall that "Pran" (as Harvard knows him) Hart co-operated in this local theater venture with Francis Grover Cleveland and Edward P. Goodnow.

HOLY CROSS BOOSTERS MAKE MERRY AT ANNUAL SPRING CONCERT AND DANCE

ROBERT GAVIN — JANET AHERN — MARY GRAHAM — FRANCIS MULLIN

B. C.-H. C. Hold Social Spotlight

Sports Foes Extend Rivalry to New Field

THE ancient rivalry between Holy Cross and Boston College, long waged on the gridiron, and other sport fields, last night hit the social whirl with the local grads of Holy Cross staging a concert and dance at the Copley-Plaza and Boston College alumni and friends serving on the committee for John La Farge's ecture in Symphony Hall to aid the Jones I. Corrigan Chair of Economics Foundation.

H. C. Singers In Concert

The crystal ballroom of the Copley-Plaza echoed with a variety of song at the Holy Cross fete. Everything from college hymns to the Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust" was sung with equal gusto by the glee club which furnished entertainment at the Boston grads' scholarship benefit.

E. Corbett Walsh, executive chairman of the undertaking, was assisted by Mrs. Sheldon Daly of Brookline, chairman of the women's committee, whose eggshell taffeta was topped by a cleverly-cut jacket of the same material. Mrs. Walsh, who before her September wedding was Noriane Feeny, chose a printed crepe, bows of red pique trimming its shoulders.

Soft springtime confections were the sartorial keynote of the evening. Helen Fitzgerald and Julia Mooney, both of Cambridge, wore similiar frocks of pastel organza, tiny ruffles forming the cape. Helen was escorted by Roger Sullivan and Julia came with her fiance, Stephen Cole. Her betrothal was announced a short while ago at a tea at the Hotel Sheraton.

Other members of their group were Marion McAllister, accompanied by Jon O'Connor and Kay Doherty, tri-colored straps trimming her white sheer, was escorted by John Ferrick.

Glimpsed two couples who are joining bridal ranks in June, Timothy Feeny and Margaret Reagy of Medford, the latter very smooth in a white satin gown, and Edward Toomey and Hazel Merrill. An antique cross of old gold added an individual touch to Hazel's ensemble of black and turquoise.

Joe Kern escorted Margaret O'Brien, very smart in a halter-necked frock of bright print. Others attending were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Solon and Mr. and Mrs. William Arthur Reilly.

Both Win

In the purple-maroon and gold social clash last night, Holy Cross may have had the edge as far as attendance was concerned but Boston College won a moral victory—if such a term may be applied to the effort being made to perpetuate the memory of the beloved professor and friend.

First Drowning In Agawam River

West Springfield, May 4—Swept over a dam while swimming in the Agawam river here, Paul Korney, 17, of Springfield was alive today but his chum, Jack Lagodits, 17, also of Springfield, was dead.

Lagodits's death was the first of the 1937 season in the swift-running Agawam.

B. C. Lecture Sponsors

Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly and Mrs. David Johnson, who had much to do with the arrangement of the lecture, were on hand. Mrs. Donnelly's long velvet wrap topping a gown of velvet and lace, and Mrs. Johnson, who has just returned from a Southern jaunt, chose a heavy ecru lace with a cluster of bright red flowers.

The Donnelly Juniors were also present, a bit shortchanged, however, for husband having to sign a check at the box office to pay for the subscription. The daughter of the former governor was exceedingly attractive, a navy print beneath her redingote bands of white trimming her navy chapeau.

Mary and Priscilla Maher were in shimmery spring evening gowns, and Mary and Rose Fitzgerald were smartly costumed in beige and black ensemble.

Mrs. Walter Browne and her doctor-husband were very interested in witnessing the campaign's launching. Mrs. Browne's black and turquoise was very attractive with her fox scarf.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith paused in the corridor to greet Mr. and Mrs. Edward Callahan, the latter before her marriage was Helen Galley.

Senorita Del Valle, president of the Mexico City College for Women, was cordially greeted by all her old friends. She has just returned from a European junket. Others attending the lecture and bringing guests to the affair were Mrs. Joseph Hurley, Mrs. David Posner, Mrs. Maurice Curran and Mrs. P. A. O'Connell.

Mary Benton Honored At Birthday Party

Dance Fete In Belmont

TWENTY-ONE will be the pass word at Mary Benton's birthday party this evening.

This dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. Jay Rogers Benton are giving at their Belmont home in honor of their daughter's 21st birthday, will be attended by 21 guests, who will assist in blowing out the 21 candles on the birthday cake.

Among the guests at this affair will be Helene August, Harold Miller, Betty Gray, Winthrop Jameson, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wettlaufer, Barbara Jameson, Robert Dell, Phyllis Park, Charles Richardson and Helen Porter.

All of Miss Benton's family will also be present, including her brothers, John, David and Nickie.

Hobby Show Repeated

The wide variety of articles displayed in the Hobby Show at the Cambridge Boat Club last year, proved so interesting to members and guests that it was repeated today. Every member who makes any sort of articles or practices a handicraft, displayed the product of his leisure hours, and it is interesting to note that though the display was in a boat club a great many of the hobbies have no connection to things nautical.

The building of a boat which was displayed, map making, and even photography might be considered allied with boat club activities; but such hobbies as pottery making, sculpture, drawing and book-binding were strangers in a foreign land in the large room of the clubhouse looking out over the Charles.

1 OF HARVARD'S 1000 RIOTERS FACES COURT

Harvard's spring fever outburst in which nearly 1000 students rioted last night, led into East Cambridge court today with arraignment of only one lad out of all the many.

Frank D. Lawrence 19, of Spring Lake, N. J., was before Judge Edward A. Counihan, Jr., charged with disturbing the peace. But the case was continued until May 12.

Patrolman Arthur Coffey testified that Lawrence was one of several students hauling wooden sawhorses across the street from street excavation work and that several sawhorses were damaged.

Meanwhile, although Charles R. Apted, head of the Harvard yard police, laughed at descriptions of the affair as a riot and declared it was "only a little spring fever," many of those who participated were fearful today of disciplinarian action by the university authorities.

EXPULSION THREAT

After the 1932 riot, in which trolley cars were seized and motorists badly used, college authorities issued notice that participation by students in further such affairs might mean their being dropped from college.

In the past several decades, however, no student has been dropped for being in a mass outburst.

Several students will be presented with bills for property damage caused during what police termed the wildest student riot in a decade. Tailors did a rushing business cleaning and pressing clothing drenched during the water barrage which started the fracas.

At the height of the vernal festivities trolley cars and automobiles were halted, bonfires were lighted, and somebody even fired a salvo of shots—but they were blanks. Approximately 1000 students took part.

The fun—or so it seemed at the time—began when students in Lev eett and Lowell Houses, overlooking narrow Plympton street, set up a cry of "Water! Water!"

CONTINUE BARRAGE

While a crowd of 200 students gathered at one end of the street, autoists, pedestrians and cyclists unknowingly passed between the dormitories. Before they could run the gauntlet they were drenched, much to the delight of both active and watching undergraduates.

When the water barrage palled and the Spring fever rose, the students, by this time about 600 strong, rushed in a body to Harvard Square.

It was there that young Lawrence was arrested.

It was at this point the police took their unprecedented action of firing two tear gas bombs into the crowd. The students, eyes smarting, fled back along Massachusetts avenue to Plympton and Holyoke streets.

3 MORE BOMBS

Near Holyoke street the rioters halted another car by wrenching the trolley wire off and 40 students began a "sit-down" strike in the trolley tracks. These were hauled off the tracks by exasperated policemen when they had been there six minutes.

Shortly before one o'clock in the morning the rioters headed toward Radcliffe College dormitories on Shepard street.

At Arsenal square they were faced by 50 police officers lined up across the street.

With catcalls and boos the students charged the police and a fight ensued in which clothes and police uniforms were torn and splattered with rotten eggs and some blows were struck.

Two more tear gas bombs were fired. This split the main body into two groups, one of which retired in the direction of Harvard. The remaining 150 courageous scouts skirted the police cordon and entered the Radcliffe dormitory grounds.

Wily girl students, complaining they could not hear the serenade, urged the Harvardites to come closer. When they did, they were deluged by buckets of water and beat a hasty retreat. In reprisal, the rioters tore up the girls' field hockey posts and put them on bonfires started with rubbish from nearby cans.

A fire alarm was sounded and firemen arrived to quell the blazes amid the jeers of the students. Meanwhile, the police had reformed their lines and in a skirmish action surprised the students with another barrage of tear gas.

The students, their eyes red by this time, fled, while the Radcliffe girls shouted with glee from their windows.

After Tear Gas Had Cleared in Riot

Into the black maria went this Harvard youth after several charges of tear gas had routed rioters in front of Radcliffe. He was given a free ride from the campus but was not arrested.

Students to the number of 2000 battled with water and fists for more than an hour while Radcliffe girls leaned from the windows and cheered them on.

Bay State Woman Gets Forensic Key

Jacksonville, Ill., May 4 — Mrs. Raymond A. Warner, Williamsburg, Mass., was awarded the distinguished service key by the executive council at a banquet of the National Forensic League here last night.

Carl Mundt, president, gave the key in appreciation of Mrs. Warner's outstanding service in building interest in high school public speaking in Massachusetts.

The award was earned in a new record time of two years. Only 13 awards have been made in 10 years and only one other to a woman.

Clark Not Held For Illegal Practice

After a hearing in municipal court today, Judge Michael J. Murray decided there was no probable cause to hold Walter J. Clark of Milton for the grand jury on charges of illegal medicinal practices.

The court, however, told Sergeant Mortimer T. O'Connor, who prosecuted, that he could take the case to the grand jury. Miss Jessie Hurrell of Westland avenue, summoned as a government witness, failed to identify Clark.

Roosevelt Sails For Port Isabel

Corpus Christi, Tex., May 4 (AP) —The Presidential yacht Potomac, escorted by the cruiser Decatur and destroyer Moffett, sailed at 7 a. m. today from Port Aransas for Port Isabel.

President Roosevelt was aboard the Potomac. The party was expected to return to Port Aransas within two days.

School Enrollment Falls With Births

Washington, May 4 (AP)—The office of education said today a failing birth rate brought in 1936 the first decline of public school enrollments in the nation's history. An estimated 130,000 fewer children were enrolled last fall than the 26,434,193 in grade and high schools two years ago.

Earthquake Recorded

Washington, May 4 (AP)—The Georgetown University seismograph recorded a moderately strong earthquake today. The university estimated the shocks were 3500 miles away, probably in the southern part of Alaska.

BANDIT GUN IN 2 SHOOTINGS

The amazing disclosure that the same gun used in the shooting of Patrolman Thomas G. Supple in Dorchester last Thursday was also used in the shooting of Walter J. Miller, former Chelsea fireman, at Stafford Springs, Conn., was made today at police headquarters.

It came from Sergeant Edward J. Seibolt, Boston police ballistician, who made comparisons of the two bullets and found the lands and grooves to match exactly.

The bullets, he said, were manufactured by the same company and were fired from a short, .38-calibre Colt.

Supple was shot by one of two daylight burglars he surprised in a house in Milton street, Dorchester. He is still in a serious condition at City Hospital.

6 SHOTS FIRED AT BURGLAR

Acting on a milkman's tip that a man was inside a filling station at Pond avenue and Washington street, Patrolmen Cornelius P. Buckley and Bernard H. Sullivan rushed to the scene.

They sighted the man inside the station. As they were about to enter, the man jumped out a rear window and fled down Morss avenue.

The burglar, however, escaped in the residential section of Juniper street. Police guarded houses in that vicinity today.

MOVE TO CURB PWA AND SAVE $150,000,000

Washington, May 4 (INS)—A proposal to save $150,000,000 by prohibiting the Public Works Administration from embarking upon new projects was added today to the many congressional economy plans.

The proposal was made in a secret session of the House appropriation deficiency sub-committee which is considering the administration recommendation for continuation of PWA for two years with authority to use an unexpended balance of that amount.

HINTS OF CHAOS

Representative Bacon (R), New York, challenged the administration recommendation for the necessity of continuing PWA, citing President Roosevelt's statement that prices in many industries have reached dangerous levels.

A stirring demand for his proposal to slash appropriations and shift 50 per cent of WPA cost to states and local communities was made by Senator Byrnes (D) South Carolina. While declaring that there was no cause for alarm, he pictured chaos unless the government soon lives within its income.

NAVY BUILDING OK'D

Byrnes shattered predictions the Federal budget would be balanced in the fiscal year 1938 even if his own 10 per cent plan accomplished a saving of $350,000,000.

All plans for consideration of new flood control programs, estimated to cost $800,000,000, have been held up by President Roosevelt.

An army housing plan, that would have cost $162,000,000, was held up at the time request of the budget bureau but an $18,000,000 item for construction at naval stations was approved by the House Appropriations Committee.

Corcoran Hears New Indictment

Another indictment, charging transportation of $22,000 worth of stolen bonds from San Antonio, Tex., to Boston, was read to William J. "Big Bill" Corcoran in federal court today, and to it the former Middlesex district attorney pleaded not guilty.

"Big Bill" had been acquitted last week of a similar charge in connection with illegal interstate transportation of a $10,000 bond stolen from a Kentucky bank.

JUDGE RAPS HUSBAND IN SUPPORT CASE

Salem, May 4 — A Cambridge salesman today accounted for all his $29-a-week salary to show Judge Edward B. O'Brien why he could pay his divorced wife only $10 a week and not $15, for the support of their three children.

Edward R. Carlton, salesman for a Somerville meat packing concern, was brought into probate court on a contempt petition of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Carlton of Sheridan street, Lynn.

At the same time, Carlton had brought a petition for modification of the amount stipulated when his wife secured an uncontested divorce March 29.

It was brought out in court that Carlton had been paying his wife $10 a week since last October, in accordance with a Lynn court order, but when his wife secured her divorce the court ordered $15 paid.

SCORED BY JUDGE

Carlton drew the wrath of Judge O'Brien when he said he didn't know his wife secured a divorce and that he had to pay her $15 a week.

Serving notice that husbands "must live up to court orders," Judge O'Brien declared:

"Judges can't run all over creation telling you hubands what to do if your wives are going to divorce you. We can't be expected to go out and bring you into court, getting your approval on the amount of money we tell you to pay.

"It's high time men realized their responsibilities when children are involved. It's all your fault you didn't come into court. It appears to me you're a 'ducker' anyway."

$9 a week for a room and two meals.

$1 a week for social security.

ORDERS CUT TO $14

$1 a week for laundry.

$1.50 a week for clothing.

$1.50 a week for cigarettes, haircut and razor blades.

$1.25 a week for payment on a loan.

Although the amount was 28.75, no explanation was made for the remaining 25 cents.

Judge O'Brien then reduced the weekly stipulation to $14, stating a man should share 50-50 with his children. He ordered, however, that Carlton have until June 2 to pay his former wife the $25 in arrears.

MUTUAL $15 PRESIDENT ON STAND; HURLEY GETS DATA

Causing a stir in the committee room, Attorney Charles F. Gadsby of Cambridge, a representative of the governor's office, took notes today at the resumed hearing by the special legislative commission probing the defunct Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company.

It was the first time any representative of Governor Hurley had appeared at hearings into conduct of the company, which collapsed last December after only a year of life, during which more than $1,000,000 was collected in premiums from the public.

Attorney Gadsby was associated with John V. Mahoney, the governor's secretary, in custer proceedings against Howard Haines Murphy, agricultural commissioner.

$15 PRESIDENT TESTIFIES

The attorney's appearance was made today during testimony by Everett P. Annis, $15-a-week president of the Commonwealth Mutual.

It came also following a visit made last night by State Insurance Commissioner Francis J. DeCelles to Governor Hurley, but both the governor and commissioner denied the call had anything to do with the Commonwealth Mutual.

Admitting he was a president not only without portfolio but without even an office, a desk or a chair of his own, Annis insisted that he did not know who was the head of Commonwealth Mutual.

Annis had not gone far into his testimony when Senator Edmund S. Oppenheimer, commission chairman, halted proceedings to warn Annis and other witnesses against forgetfulness or evasions.

"The commission," declared Senator Oppenheimer, after conferring with the other members, "wants to warn you and others here of faulty memory. We would like answers to our questions and not any evasions.

THOUGHT IT'D BE NICE

"We have had experience here and in court and we know when a witness is telling all he knows. We want to have answers to our questions."

Annis testified that before becoming president of the Commonwealth Mutual he had been an automobile salesman and an insurance agent. Asked how it came that he was made president of Commonwealth Mutual, he said:

"I was approached in August or September, 1935, by Thomas Black, an insurance man, who told me a company was in process of formation. I thought it would be a nice thing to have a new company in Massachusetts."

Representative Philip Barnett of New Bedford, a commission member, questioned Annis.

Q—Did Black ask you to put any money in the venture? A—No, sir.

DIDN'T KNOW OTHERS

Q—Did he tell you who was back of the company? A—No, sir.

Q—Did he tell you who the other incorporators were? A—No.

Q—What was your capacity to be? A—President.

Q—Did you ask anybody else about the company? A—I don't think I did.

Q—Before you agreed to go into the venture, you made no investigation? A—Only as I have told you. Mr. Black wanted me, as an honest, upright citizen, to be on the board.

Q—Did he finally tell you who was back of the company and was putting the money in? A—Yes, Frank Cohen of New York.

Q—Did anyone else put any money in? A—No.

CONSULTED OTHERS

Q—Did Black put any money in? A—No.

Q—Did he tell you whether the insurance company had the sanction of the Insurance Department? Did he tell anything about that? A—No.

Annis then said: "I did everything I could to find out if everything was going to be on the level."

"I consulted people," he said, "but I don't know who they were —it's so long ago. The people I consulted were insurance men and brokers."

It was at this point that Chairman Oppenheimer interjected his warning against "faulty memory."

"Didn't it seem strange to you that Black would come to you and ask you to be president of an insurance company?" asked Chairman Oppenheimer of the witness.

"I wouldn't say so—no," replied Annis.

"But you never had any experience in the insurance business, did you?"

$15 A WEEK SALARY

Representative Barnett resumed questioning.

Q—Was any salary voted to you at any time? A—Yes, in January or February.

Q—How much? A—Fifteen dollars.

Annis said he had to sign checks and other important papers and that he was in the office almost daily.

"I was supposed," he said, "to oversee the affairs of the company, but I didn't, because the board of directors chose a man, Mr. Ralshaw, as general manager and auditor."

In his own case, Annis also declared, the Commonwealth Mutual furnished a surety bond to him.

Everything was "going along fine," he said, until the directors met on October 12, 1936, in the annual session and voted Luigi (Count) Castelli, of New York, in as president.

However, things became a bit complicated then, because although Castelli was the voted president, his bond was never approved and Annis continued to be the bonded head.

Q—For a man who was president of a concern, you know little about what was going on? A—That's right, but I knew more about what was going on than I was given credit for, because I had my eyes open.

Annis then revealed that when he accepted the job as president originally he was asked at the same time to write out his resignation, that the officers might have it.

Cohen, the witness stated, visited the Boston offices "about three times a month," but never talked business with Annis; the conversations were mainly about pleasure.

PUT UP THE MONEY

Q—You understood that he was the guiding hand in the company? A—I did. I knew he had put up the guaranteed capital.

The board of directors was so set up, Annis testified, that half the number were representing the Commonwealth Mutual, while the other half represented the guaranteed capital investor.

Q—(By Representative Frederick H. Tarr)—There were a lot of things that went over your head in this company? A—Yes.

Q—You didn't care as long as you got your $15 a week? A—No, that isn't so.

Annis denied that he was a "dummy who danced when somebody else pulled the strings."

"Didn't you feel the directors were dummies?" Representative Tarr asked.

"No, I didn't," he replied.

Q—Who was the real head of the Commonwealth Mutual Company? A—I was supposed to be, but I wasn't.

Q—Who was? A—I don't konw.

"PLAYING AROUND"

Annis testified he thought R. E. Lashaw, general manager of the company, was "playing" with the guaranteed capital group of the concern while Attorney George S. Brain, general counsel, was "playing" with the Commonwealth group.

Q—With dissensions between the two groups didn't you think you should take up the matter with the state insurance department? A—We talked about it several times.

The witness stated he resigned as a director "because of the haphazard manner in which things were going."

Q—You admited you put no money into the company, didn't you? A—Yes.

Q—And that none of the other directors did? A—Yes, it grew up like a weed.

Annis testified Ryan was first voted $5000 a year as general counsel and that at the August meeting it was voted to increase it to $10,000 a year.

Q—Did you sign a contract with Ryan to be general counsel? A—I think I did.

Q—If Cohen sent a man on from New York and wanted him to be a director he was made one, wasn't he? A—Yes.

Q—And you had nothing to do with it? A—No.

Q—As a matter of fact, you were a dummy who danced when somebody else pulled the string, weren't you? A—No.

RAISED TO $20 WEEK

Q—Isn't it a fact that you voted the way Ryan told you to? A—No, I have my own mind.

He testified that at the August meeting, when Ryan's salary was doubled by the directors, his own salary as president was increased from $15 to $20 a week.

Q—What was the reason for doubling Ryan's salary? A—The increased amount of work he was called upon to do when the company grew.

Q—Ryan was also voted $35 a day for his appearances in court, wasn't he? A—Yes.

Q—Were you satisfied that Ryan was worth $10,000 a year? A—Yes, he put in a lot of work.

Q—And were you satisfied that you were worth the $20 a week you got as president? A—Yes. I was satisfied with a small salary, as I wanted to see the company come along. I didn't want to grab everything.

Annis testified that Insurance Commissioner DeCelles told him the second week after the annual meeting in October that he was still president of the company.

QUIT SIGNING CHECKS

Q—What did you do following that talk in DeCelles' office? A—I asked DeCelles if I would still sign checks as president of the company and he said I could, as I was still president. I said to DeCelles: "Don't you think I ought to have the approval of Mr. Slater, in writing?" DeCelles thought that was what I should do. I had a talk with Mr. Slater. I told him I wanted a certificate giving me authority to sign checks, but he didn't give it to me. He said he would rather talk it over with Count Castelli, as he was a nervous man and sometimes flew into a rage.

Life Flickers in Shadow of Unlit Birthday Candles

EXCLUSIVE

Little eyes too weary to see the frosted birthday cake on the pillow; little hands too weak to caress a favorite baby doll. Baby Winona Nelson, daughter of an Upton couple, is under an oxygen tent at Whitinsville Hospital, asleep in the valley of the shadows. She was lost last week in the woods for four days and four nights. Yesterday was her second birthday and doctors gave her a blood transfusion. Today they said: "She has every chance to live now. The transfusion looks like a success." Then came the dreaded convulsions.

BABY NELSON'S LIFE PERILED

now. The pneumonia has nearly closed the "abys" left lung, the deadly gangrene has attacked her left foot. Her frost-bitten hands are nearly normal again.

NORMAL SLEEP

Until George Wischer, one of five members of the Jeffrey L. Vail post, A. L., gave his gift of blood, doctors were in despair of saving the baby's life.

The present came in the closing hours of the little girl's tragic second birthday anniversary. She lapsed into a coma after the operation, but then began to sleep normally.

Still standing by at the hospital today were other members of the Legion post, ready with more blood if the calls should be made.

GETS BIRTHDAY CAKE

The frosted birthday cake that Mrs. George Nelson brought to the hospital for her baby's second birthday still stands by the little cot in the hospital, but Winona is too weak to see it.

Only at infrequent intervals has Winona recognized her "mummie" during her fight for life in the oxygen tent. Whitinsville townspeople, sympathizing with the parents of the child, sent several birthday cakes to the hospital but they were similarly barred.

Throughout last night neighbors of the Nelson family kept a vigil with Winona's parents.

Death of Girl's Baby Told Jury

While Harriet Boyden, 20-year-old student at an exclusive Back Bay school, still lay on a bed at Massachusetts General Hospital, the circumstances attending the death of her baby were told to the Suffolk county grand jury today.

Seven witnesses, including Inspector Harry Pierce, head of the police homicide squad, were summoned to testify. The others were Hazel Hurd, Margaret McDonald, James Gordon and Robert Ingram, attaches of the school, and two doctors.

The girl, daughter of Ulysses Boyden, clerk of the New York state assembly, was placed under technical arrest on a charge of murder nearly a month ago after a new-born baby boy was found strangled in the closet of her dormitory room.

The jury will not report until tomorrow.

VANDALS DAMAGE FILM UNION OFFICE

Hollywood, May 4 (INS) — A branch office of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, which has refused to join the motion picture studio strike, was invaded by vandals during the night, according to reports here.

The front door was forced open and windows and furniture smashed, it was said.

The International Alliance, which made an agreement with the producers several weeks ago, has remained aloof in the strike called by ten unions of the Federated Motion Picture Crafts, demanding recognition of the majors tudios for collective bargaining purposes. The alliance has been assailed by the federation.

The incident was the second report of vandalism to groups related to the industry since the strike was called Friday night.

STUDIOS OPERATE

Pickets, working in three hour shifts, were continuing their peaceful patrol of the major studios. Production continued on every lot, although hampered by the absence of 6000 workers.

First violence believed attributable to the strike occurred when four unidentified men invaded the "House of Wesmore," one of the film capital's leading make-up studios, and sprinkled creosote over the premises.

Police, who today had posted guards about the establishment, estimated $10,000 damage had been done to costly furnishings and woodwork. The marauders forced their way in by threatening a night watchman.

Menwhile strikers claimed they had been offered aid by the powerful Teamsters' Union and waged a concerted drive to cut off shipments of supplies into the studios.

Elissa Landi, film star, who according to pickets declined to pass the line, issued a personal denial and said she was not working on a picture at present.

COAL STRIKERS TIGHTEN TIEUP

Threat of a complete tieup of coal and fuel oil deliveries in the Quincy area, following tightening of the strike of union truck drivers, occupied the spotlight of New England's labor troubles today.

Fearing violence may result in the new tension, Chief John J. Avery of the Quincy police has called out extra men to guard coal and fuel plants and is holding a reserve force at headquarters for emergencies.

The truck drivers were making plans today to stop the delivery of coal, wood, fuel oil, gasoline and motor oil, except to hospitals and homes where sickness exists.

The coal truck drivers' strike has been in progress for a week.

Court Flays Cruel Boys, Fines Man

Boys who would deliberately cut a puppy's tail while he howled and squirmed in agony may live to try "a real surgical operation" some day, Judge John Duff warned in municipal court today as he instructed police to prosecute two North End juveniles.

The judge said this after finding 24-year-old Ciriesco Di Nunzio, also of the North End, guilty of cruelty to an animal. Di Nunzio was fined $10, but allowed two weeks to pay. The case grew out of the partial amputation of the tail of Di Nunzio's puppy. Sergeant John J. Walkins made the arrests.

Busmen Give London Warning

London, May 4 (AP)—A warning that a complete tieup of London's transportation in these crowded preCoronation days might follow any attempt to break the strike of 25,000 bus drivers and conductors came today from leaders of the walkout.

These were reports that some members of the subway and street car unions were eager to strike in support of the busmen, although the latter's organization has opposed any sympathy walkout, at least until after a board of inquiry reports.

A bus union official said, however, that the danger of spread of the four-day stoppage would be aggravated greatly if motor coach companies were permitted to run coaches over the idle bus routes.

The board of inquiry was to resume hearings this afternoon on the union's demand of a 7½-hour day and slower bus schedules. Busmen now work eight hours. It was expected the board's report would be issued Friday.

U. S. to List All Guns Under Plan

Washington, May 4 (AP)—Attorney General Cummings asked Congress today to require every owner of a rifle, shotgun, revolver or pistol to register his weapon with the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Registration would be free, Cummings said, but a $1 tax would be payable to the revenue bureau for every firearm sold.

MAINE STRIKE TRIAL OPENS

Lewiston, Me., May 4 (AP)—Trial of seven Committee for Industrial Organization leaders in the Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike, on charges of contempt of court, opened today before Supreme Court Justice Harry Manser.

The defendants, including Powers Hapgood, New England Committee for Industrial Organization secretary, were cited by the court in connection with alleged violation of Judge Manser's recent injunction declaring the strike illegal. Trial had been twice postponed pending peace conversations.

KY. BOY SENATE QUIZ WITNESS

Washington, May 4 (AP)—A towheaded boy of 12 told Senate investigators today that he had watched four Harlan County, Ky., deputy sheriffs fire a volley of rifle bullets from automobiles into a railroad of United Mine Workers organizers.

The boy, Markham Clouse, shyly testified before the La Follette civil liberties committee that he was "hunting scrap iron" along the wooded banks of a mountain stream on February 8 when he saw the officers start shooting from a nearby cliff.

U. S. PROPOSES NEW AID TO END STRIKES

Washington, May 4 (AP)—Secretary Perkins proposed expansion of state labor mediation services today to help settle and prevent strikes during the development of collective bargaining.

She said in an address prepared for her second labor-industry collective bargaining conference:

"The first of these conferences . . . brought about the understanding that it will be the purpose of management and labor to practice collective bargaining as it is defined in the National Labor Relations Act (Wagner act), now the law of the land under the recent Supreme Court decision.

"Many employers and workers, however, lack experience in collective bargaining.

"Because of this there will be need for co-operation among state and federal agencies engaged in conciliation work—and representatives of labor and management—so as to minimize stoppages of work through misunderstandings by either workers or employers.

"Federal and state conciliators can perform a highly useful service in the public interest with the co-operation I am sure they will receive from labor and management in the coming months.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Consideration, Not Kisses, Real Test of Man's Affection

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A correspondent sends me a clipping that the co-eds of Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, who are residents of Ban Righ Hall, may kiss their escorts goodnight from now on, if they feel like it—but only in the foyer.

The rule was decided upon by the Hall council, composed of 12 co-eds, after a heated discussion in which the "liberals" won.

Another correspondent, sending the same clipping, asks: "Isn't all this insistance on kissing modern—a product of the jazz age? To me, it seems common."

If this young lady will look into the matter, she will discover that kissing is a pretty ancient rite.

While we have no record that Adam and Eve kissed and made up, after the unfortunate apple episode, very likely they did.

Among the Maoris, kissing, as we understand it, is unknown. They rub noses. This may be more sanitary, but would eliminate much of the verbal thrills in Best Sellers. "Scarlet," "teasing," "ruby," "Cupid's bow" would all have to be cut out, in describing kisses as we know them, if the nose-to-nose embrace of these Polynesian people became universal.

A PLEDGE TO KISS

Not long ago a judge, famous for the reconciliations he has brought about between warring husbands and wives, exacted from certain husbands a promise that they would kiss their wives every morning before leaving for business, and every evening when returning home.

Several clergymen have exacted the same pledge.

The only excuse for kissing is a natural—not to say uncontrollable—urge to give that particular pledge of affection. And when a good smack smacks of a sentence handed out by bench or pulpit, it is about as unappetizing as lukewarm soup.

It's a question whether the most possessive, heart-hungry wife would get any pleasure out of a kiss bestowed upon her as a matter of grim routine.

It would have just about as much sentiment as "where is my hat?"

The routine kisses of husbands and wives stand for nothing more than putting across a chore that is expected of them. Neither puts much emotion into the good-bye morning kiss, even when they are truly devoted life-partners.

The husband is probably thinking of his mail, or if he'll miss the time-clock again, and the wife is trying to remember in which department stores she saw an advertisement for children's coats, marked down.

It would be a sorry business to judge a husband's affection by these routine morning kisses.

The good husband is a good provider who does not play at being the great lover, as he grabs his hat, and rushes for the marts of trade in the morning.

"ONLY FOOL'S GOLD"

About a week ago this column, under the head of "PLEASE DON'T BE CHEAP," published a letter from a young man who had been literally kissed out of his engagement by his fiancee, who hounded him with her endearments.

This letter brought a tremendous response from young men, who had apparently been more kissed against than kissing. Next week some of their letters will be published.

But here is just a sentence from one of them:

"Kissing is like prospecting for gold, and only 'fool's gold' is found on the surface."

* *

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

No question about it, I am really in love, and for a while I thought he was too. But we have been "razzed" so much by other people that he is drifting away from me.

Shall I politely tell them "razzers" to stop, when I really am tempted to use violence?

It is hard to ignore them because they are so persistent.

D. D. S.

DEAR CHILD:

Teasing or razzing young people about each other is a very ill-bred form of persecution, and it's little wonder the girl feels tempted to use violence.

She might try teasing them about all sorts of absurd things, until they beg for mercy.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My sister, who used to live in this city, is returning for a visit for the first time in nine years. I want to entertain for her some Sunday afternoon, regular "open house" for her old friends.

I'm not planning to send out any invitations, but thought of putting a notice in the society column of our paper.

As I want to serve rather substantial refreshments, would 2:30 to 5 p. m. be a proper time? And what and when shall I serve, as guests will be coming and going at different times?

Also, should I, as hostess, receive with her, even though the guests will be her friends rather than mine?

I am planning to have a guest-book for signatures on that occasion.

MRS. D. M.

DEAR READER:

As there are always people who do not see things in the papers or miss the particular item they're expected to see, don't you think it would be better if, in addition to putting the notice in the paper, you phoned as well.

You might ask your sister for a list of the friends she would like to see, and write notes or phone them.

Two-thirty to five p. m. strikes me as rather an inconvenient hour for a party, as it would be neither a luncheon nor a tea, but fall between these two. If you said from 5 to 7 you could have a substantial buffet tea, which is very popular in some sections of the country.

Yes, you should receive with your sister, as hostess. The guest-book is a very nice idea.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

STUFFED gingerbread is a noble surprise; split fresh gingerbread, and fill with a mixture of cream cheese and chopped dates, moistened with cream to the right consistency. Serve warm or cold.

CHAPTER TWENTY

It was not the voice of Beatrice Gwynne that came to Roger over the telephone. The moment he heard a male voice, a great sigh of relief escaped him.

"Oh, that you, Roger?"

"Yes. Who is speaking?" Roger asked.

Now it was Dorothy's turn to be alarmed. Suppose, she thought, that it was Frank Harris calling her up to do more pleading. But her fears were only momentary. She heard Roger say, "Oh, Paul Francis. What is it, Paul?"

Roger listened quite a while. Dorothy did not have the slightest suspicion that Catherine had gone out to meet Francis.

"Well," she heard Roger say, "if you have made up your mind, there is no argument. Thanks for calling and explaining."

He replaced the instrument and turned to Dorothy.

"Paul Francis," he said, "imagine calling me at this hour."

"Did he want money?"

"Oh no. He is going away, first thing tomorrow, he and his wife. They are going to Majorca, to join some friends."

"But what about Cath's portrait?"

Roger shrugged.

"That rather knocks your little idea in the head, doesn't it?"

Suspicion

"What idea," Dorothy asked, coldly.

"That Paul was making love to Cath."

"I never said any such thing. At least, the idea merely passed through my head." A flash of anger made her close her hand tightly on the rose stem and a thorn pricked her. She hoked at the roses and held them out to him.

"What have you been up to?" she asked.

"Up to?" Roger gave a guilty start. "Now isn't that a bit of gratitude for you?"

"You haven't bought me flowers, of your own free will, for 10 years. Naturally I have a right to be suspicious."

"Come now—I couldn't be with you tonight and I wanted to make amends."

"Well, they ARE lovely, Roger. Did you get through with your work?"

"Tell me about Beatrice Gwynne."

"Oh, good heavens!"

"What's the matter, Roger?" she asked, accusingly.

"Do let the creature drop."

"There was no need," she said, finally, "to go savage about it." ed.

"Let's not," she came back lelly.

"Trouble is," he said, turning on her, "you take me too much for granted. I'm just your middle-aged husband, in your eyes fat as a porpoise. It would never occur to you that some girl might find me fascinating!"

"No! Then you have been philandering with that actress!"

"Nothing of the sort," Roger declared, and regretted what he had just said.

"Not so loud, please, no need for the children to know of your disgrace. Oh, how utterly beastly of you, and then to come home and throw it in my face."

Listen Dot. I am not throwing—"

"Yes you are."

"YOU stop shouting," he said sullenly.

"You are positively smirking, revelling in it. Well, you needn't be so smug about yourself because I have had an offer, too."

Roger looked up, one sock halfway removed.

"You?" he said, chokingly.

"Yes, me. Your stringy domesticated wife. You would never dream that anyone would fall in love with me, would you?"

"Frank Harris."

"Oh," Roger began to laugh, but it was not a convincing laugh.

"It is nothing for you to laugh off, Roger. He wants to MARRY me."

"What did he try to do?" he demanded.

Dorothy tossed her head. "It is a long story," she said, with assumed cheerfulness, "a long, sad story and I haven't the slightest intention of telling you anything about it."

"I suppose it was love at sight."

"If it was," Dorothy blazed at him, "there was nothing cheap and tawdry about it—nothing like your beastly little intrigue with that—do I have to name the sort of person she is?"

No Forgiveness

He decided to go down stairs for a spot of brandy in order to fortify himself. Dorothy heard the door opened and closed and peered out. From the dressing room doorway she could not see Roger's clothes.

Had he taken them? Was he going to leave the house? The thought made her faint.

Then she got up, opened the door to the hall and listened. She heard him bump into a piece of furniture and heard his muttered growl. She couldn't restrain a giggle, knowing that he was in his bare feet.

Roger came back, expecting her to ask what he had been doing, but she continued with her hair, quite as though he was a thousand miles away.

Roger picked up his clothes and stalked into the dressing room with an attempt at dignity. Being barefooted and only in his shorts, all dignity was missing. He closed the door with just as much of a slam as Dorothy had done. If she waited until he spoke first, he thought, she would simply wait eons and eons.

MARRIED COMRADES

Garrison By Adele

CHAPTER 293

Dickey's arms were still around me as he put his query concerning Roderick, but the tenderness of his mood had vanished.

The caressing tones of his voice which had described affairs at the farmhouse, telling of my father's injunction not to inform me concerning certain details of his journey, had been replaced by a critical, disapproving inflection.

If there had not been something at stake which I considered vital to Roderick, I should have been only too glad to rescind the decision I had made concerning Roderick's being left behind. Did Dicky think, I wondered hotly, that I enjoyed leaving the small boy behind, to pass a lonely day while Junior made the coveted trip with us?

"If you mean," I said with careful coolness, "that I intend to keep the pact I have already made with Roderick, you are eminently correct. Unless, of course," I amended elaborately, "you wish to overrule my decision. But, if boys that you have taken matters into your own hands, and that you do, I must ask you to tell the Roderick's going is not my wish at all."

The sound which came from Dicky's throat was neither a snort nor an objurgation, but held elements of both. And the expression of his eyes was most familiar to me. It held exasperation which was almost anger, coupled with the rueful respect which one gives an adversary who has scored a point.

"Of course," he said after a second's wait, and carefully mimicking my manner of speech. "I have no wish to overrule your decision, nor any intention of so doing. As you are diabolically well aware, we have had a pact —spoken and unspoken—concerning discipline ever since Junior came into the world, and neither of us ever goes contrary to a decision of the other where the children can suspect it.

"But that doesn't prevent my asking where in the cook book you found this recipe for torturing a child? It isn't like you, Madge, I'll swear it isn't."

There was a growl in his voice that jabbed deeply into my nerves. Without realizing what I was doing, I threw up my head, clenched my fingers into my palms and faced him truculently.

"Perhaps if you had been with us that day," I began, keeping my voice low and carefully modulated with an effort, "and had seen how nearly Roderick brought himself and Junior to sudden and agonizing death, you would not be so squeamish about giving him some punishment that would make him remember that particular escapade for some time to come."

"If I had been with you that day," Dicky growled, "I would have given him a thrashing that he would have remembered all his life."

"And I probably should have acquiesced in your decision," I asserted promptly, prudently hiding my knowledge that tender-hearted Dicky could not have given a thrashing to any child.

Why didn't you trim him up, or quired. "Then everything would quired. "Then everything would have been wound up at once?"

"You know that any whipping I could have given him would have not hurt him, would have hurt only my dignity and authority over him. And I do not think you are serious in suggesting that I turn your nephew over to a stranger for a whipping."

"No—you score a point there," he said, "But I don't see why you had to pick this particular trip."

"If I had known you were coming up, I probably should have chosen something else," I conceded. "For it does savor of cruelty to keep him home when you are to be of the party."

"Then couldn't you—?" Dicky began, and looked at me pleadingly, his truculence all gone.

Prepared MUSTARD Is Spring APPETIZER

By MARTHA LEE

TAKE a good look at that jar of fine prepared mustard, standing in your refrigerator—there's one spring appetizer all ready for use.

Spread it on steaks, chops, roasts; add it to stews, soups, salads and salad dressings; stir it into prepared foods such as spaghetti . . . before or during cooking.

For a rich dark prepared mustard is more than a table relish, it's a subtle seasoning for cooking and a real aid to digestion, coaxing the digestive juices to become active.

Roast Spring Lamb has lively flavor spread with prepared mustard before roasting.

Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb is a tempting economy roast. Have your butcher remove the bone, especially the upper fan-shaped bone.

In the pocket that is left, spread generously with prepared mustard, then stuff with dressing: 2 cups small cubes dried bread; seasoned with 1 onion, finely cut, 1 slice bacon, cut fine, salt, pepper; moistened with ¼ cup boiling water in which has been melted 2 tablespoons butter.

Brown meat in hot oven, then reduce heat and roast, allowing 20 minutes to the pound.

Liver, important the year round for its blood-enriching iron, should be served frequently in the spring when so many members of our families are tired and worn from the fatigues of winter. For:

CASSEROLE OF LIVER

Spread thin slices with prepared mustard. Dust with flour and brown in hot fat in frying pan. Transfer to casserole, add hot water sufficient to cover. Bake, covered, in moderate oven ½ to ¾ hour, until tender. Note: beef liver is less expensive than veal, and just as tender, just as tasty, when properly seasoned and cooked.

Prepared mustard has a particularly pleasing flavor when used in salad dressing. This unusual Russian Dressing combines our old time stand-by, mayonnaise, chili sauce and an assortment of other ingredients to produce a delicious salad accompaniment.

This is one more place where your use of prepared mustard steps out into high society and becomes associated with something besides its more common companion—the frankfurter—so popular at football and baseball games.

RUSSIAN DRESSING

1 cup mayonnaise
½ cup chili sauce
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons minced pimento
1 tablespoon minced green pepper
1 tablespoon chopped pickle

Mix ingredients well, in order given.

This dressing is particularly appropriate to serve with vegetables, meat and fish salads. You will, of course, remember to include a relish tray of ripe and stuffed olives, celery curls, and radish roses, to set off the salad texture and flavor.

There are really a great many uses for prepared mustard in the cooking of meats, vegetables and sauces. Add a bit to the next ham loaf you prepare, and for a new treat in a vegetable dish, the following recipe for Cabbage with Mustard Butter Sauce will prove a real delight.

Good Manners

TABLECLOTH

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me if it is proper to use a lace tablecloth on my dining-room table when it is not in use? I also have a centerpiece of flowers and a pair of prism candlesticks on it. I have been informed that this is not in good taste. READER.

It is best not to leave lace tablecloth, even a lace tablecloth, on the dining-room table when the table is not in use. Such use necessarily takes away from the fresh appearance that a cloth should have when set for the table. Remove your tablecloth after each meal, and on the table use as decoration your centerpiece of flowers.

Rhine Lavender Cologne

Refreshing Fragrance For Summer Days

By ARLENE GOULD

THAT good old summer stand-by—cologne—returns to take another bow. This time it's an utterly "different" and charming fragrance and so irresistibly lovely that we can't help growing rhapsodic about it.

It is called Rhine Lavender, and this newest version of feminine witchery recalls a whole train of romances of the castled river. Here is romance made deliciously tangible with a breath suggestive of the lovely Lorelei herself.

While there are as many varieties of lavender as there are shades in the rainbow, you will find this affair totally unlike any other. Use it like a perfume on your handkerchief, at your throat—in your hair.

The sponsors of this affair have been making colognes for almost one hundred and fifty years. The labels on their bottles have become a symbol of the world's finest and this new one seems well qualified to carry on worthily a reputation worthily won.

Your grandmother used the first of these colognes, and so did her grandmother before her. And doubtless as a child, you came to associate their immaculate fragrance with all the well-groomed women you knew.

Poor unfortunate Lorelei that she had no Rhine lavender to heighten her charm in these days. However, if you are something of a 1937 siren you will welcome this new achievement to add to your preferred list of irresistibles. And to heighten the charm of your person or boudoir, try spraying it on. In this way the refreshing essences are properly diffused. (Atomizer tops are optional.)

POSED BY SIMONE SIMON

To learn the name of this Rhine Lavender cologne and the store where it is sold, Call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Warners to Produce 'Amstel' on Stage

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 4 (US)—Some of RKO's ready cash will be spent this fall on Broadway. The first move in that direction will be to produce Jacques Deval's "Amstel" on the stage with a New York cast.

* * *

Warner's have made money with the legitimate shows they have backed, namely, "Three Men on a Horse," "Boy Meets Girl," "White Horse Inn," and "Tovarich," the latter also by Deval.

Of course, the chief interest of the movie folk in crashing Broadway is to later convert these stage successes into screen plays. It's a paying investment since the prices now asked for any sort of a successful play are in the high brackets. If RKO is as successful as Warner's, the movies may get a stranglehold on Broadway plays.

* * *

Norma Talmadge is returning to motion pictures, not as a star but as story editor for David Selznick. It all happened at Marion Davies' party when Norma and David started reminiscing about the days when Norma helped write her own screen plays and was active in selecting her own screen material.

"You had better ideas than any of our paid writers," David told her. "How about working for me?" Norma replied:

"Well, I don't want to return to the screen as an actress but I would be interested in the story end. If you really want me I'd like the job."

* * *

Prepare for a remake on "Rio Rita," Harry Tierney's tuneful musical. It will be brought out of its wrappings, renovated and dolled up a bit, and given a lavish 1937 production with Irene Dunne as its star. Not so very much renovating either, for it's really a natural in its pictorial qualifications as far as motion pictures are concerned. As Mayo you remember Bebe Daniels and John Boles not so long ago singing the beautiful Tierney music. It was one of the first successful musical operettas to be made after the advent of sound.

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood: Delmar Daves, all by his lonesome in Marion Davies' party, revealed that Kay Francis had flown to New York for a brief five and a half. And her hurried trip East is one of the grandest gestures I've ever known from one friend to another.

She had her costume, a very elaborate one, ready for Marion's party when Jessica Barthelmess telephoned in tears. Dick is seriously ill in a London hospital with sinus and Jess, Kay's closest friend, is in New York alone with all the funeral arrangements of Dick's mother on her hands. So Kay thought the only thing to do was literally fly to her friend. She will be back some time today since "First Lady" is ready to shoot.

* * *

A line or two: Andy Devine and all the other actors in the cast of "The Road Back" have received letters that their pictures will be banned in Germany from now on because they are appearing in the Erich Remarque story. By the way, did you know that Remarque's real name is "Kramer," which is Remarque spelled backward with Que instead of the K? . . . Joan Bennett won't do "Stand In" after all. She's set for "Summer Lightning" which means Walter Wanger will have to find another stellar "Stand In."

* * *

The LLOYD BACONS stalking the stork and the welcome little stranger will arrive in the late fall; JEAN HARLOW going literally in a big way with DONALD FRIEDE, book publisher; SIMONE SIMON taking singing lessons in readiness for her next movie; the BRUCE FLETCHER "high party" offering many varieties of costumes. ALICE BRADY creating a panic in a high hat made of gardenias and carrying two of her dogs, with a placard, "Smell Us—High Smel."

The BERT WHEELERS starting something new—an old fashioned bridge party with prizes; JOE PENNER and his missus dining on duck, of all things; the frequency of the GERTRUDE MICHAEL-EDDIE STEPHENSON dinner dates beginning to look like something; the three most expensive cooks in Hollywood, JEANETTE MacDONALD, GENE RAYMOND and FAY WRAY, cooking their own dinner at Fay's beach home. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Pick Lesser Of Evils

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Correct defense may at times be nothing more than the ability to choose the lesser of two evils.

East, in the hand shown below, guarded against the loss of one trick and by so doing conceded two tricks and a game contract.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ J 9 3 7♡ K J 10♢ 7 5 4 2♣ K 6 | |
| ♠ 3♡ A 8 7 6 3♢ K 9 8♣ Q 10 4 3 | NorthWest EastSouth | ♠ K Q 8 5 4 3♡ 5♢ Q 10♣ J 9 8 3 |
| | ♠ A 10♡ Q 9 4 3♢ A 9 7 2♣ A 7 5 | |

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♢ | 1 ♡ | 2 ♢ | 2 ♠ |
| 2 N T | Pass | 3 N T | Pass |
| Pass | Dble. | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

West decided that on the bidding neither his own suit nor partner's would make a propitious lead and, therefore, tried the "surprise attack" of the fourth-best club. Dummy ducked and declarer permitted East's Jack to hold.

A club continuation was won by the King, and the seven of spades followed. East jumped to the conclusion that declarer, probably holding the Ace and ten, was trying to "sneak past" a trick and to prevent this, split his honors, playing the Queen.

In so doing he had played directly into declarer's hand. The Ace won the trick, and the ten established two more spade tricks in dummy. East, after winning the spade King, could not guess that his side had two potential diamond tricks and, therefore, continued with clubs, declarer winning. Heart leads by declarer then established three heart tricks before the diamond Ace was driven out and thus the contract was fulfilled.

East's defense in the spade suit had been very short-sighted. The danger of declarer winning the first spade lead from dummy with the ten was not so great as the practical assurance that splitting the honors would result in establishment of dummy's suit for three tricks.

"YOUR FIGURE MISTER!"

High Calories Lurk at the 'Nineteenth' Hole

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IN the spring of the year a man's fancy seriously turns to thoughts of . . . golf. Since the game gets you out into the open it is an excellent tonic, and if you don't stop at the 19th hole it can help you to lower that score on the bathroom scales.

The main difficulty is that you are all too likely to overestimate your golf as exercise. Here is the way it goes: In playing 18 holes of golf, you walk between four and five miles.

Walking at the rate of two and one-half miles per hour you burn 1.21 calories per pound in an hour. If you hurry your game and complete the 18 holes in two hours, then for weight of 160 pounds you burn 192 calories per hour, or around 384 calories for the 18 holes.

As to the number of calories used per stroke, you would not add more than 10 per cent to the calories used in walking. The large whiskey and soda waiting for you at the 19th hole contains 300 calories—just enough to put such an edge on your appetite that you tuck away 1,200 more calories at lunch or dinner. At that rate you can gain weight on golf. To burn these calories, plus the others taken during the day, you would have to walk home—pushing the car.

It is an easy matter to take more calories than you use in activity and thus to gain weight. Excess weight, however, is not the only health factor which lessens your chances of living to Mr. Rockefeller's age. Your life expectancy is further decreased by excess abdominal girth. One inch of excess beltline cuts down the life expectancy by 5 per cent, and another excess inch takes away another 5 per cent.

As Dr. K. H. Beall, of Fort Worth, Texas, explains it: "A man of 50 who has let himself acquire 50 pounds excess of surplus flesh, with 4 inches of excess abdominal girth, has sacrificed about 15 years of life to the parasitism of fat. Truly, a man's beltline is his lifeline."

A man's healthy waistline is 5 inches less than the chest circumference, but golf is very little help in keeping the waist measurement within bounds. The game affords plenty of arm and leg exercise, but the occasional waistline twist will not keep the muscles of the abdomen strong and healthy. Of all your muscles, those of the abdomen are the most important.

POSITION: Lie flat on the back on the floor, knees flexed and soles of feet on the floor. Contract the stomach muscles until this region is flat.

MOVEMENT: Extend the feet until the knees are straight and the heels are about two inches from the floor. Then gradually, holding the feet together, raise the legs until they form an angle of about 27 degrees with the floor. Lower the legs slowly to within two inches of the floor, and again raise to the angle. Relax, return to original position, and rest.

Reduce the exercise three times. As the muscles become stronger, increase the number of times you perform the exercise. Try to have the abdomen flat.

The leaflets "Waistline and Beltlines," "Man-Size Reducing Menus", and "Pointers to Slimness" will help you to keep your weight and waist at normal. These leaflets may be obtained by writing to Ida Jean Kain, care the Boston Evening American. Send a large stamped and addressed envelope with your request.

Revival of a Feminine Mode

DISCARDED for years as too sweet, simple and girlish, ribbons are now rampant in Paris, according to Harper's Bazaar. Famous couturiers are showing ribbon jackets, boleros, capes and even gloves and bracelets entirely of ribbon. Grosgrain ribbons are woven into eccentric bird and flower motifs and applied to hats and gowns. Narrow black velvet ribbons again band Summer frocks and colored ribbons are threaded through lingeries and tea gowns.

No Money Worries

HAPPY Ken and Lois! Off for their first vacation in five years—because this year they budgeted.

Free from care for two whole weeks! No worries over money! They'll gather energy, meet stimulating new people, come home refreshed, thankful that their budget made this grand trip possible.

Jack is mighty proud of the way Lois pulled them out of their financial muddle. They used to live a sort of day-to-day existence hoping things would come out even afraid they wouldn't. And sure enough, the first-of-the-month bills crowded them farther and farther into debt.

Lois found out how a budget helps them get more for their money than they used to. With planned spending they can take advantage of sales they had to pass up before. Their budget is a yardstick to measure the importance of things they'd like to buy. Expensive, out-of-season peaches or local strawberries in season" The dress with the large, faddy print or the simple navy crepe which will be just as smart next spring? Budgeting puts them in the habit of choosing the best values.

Following the tips of our 40-page booklet, HOW TO BUDGET YOUR INCOME, they divided Ken's salary to cover rent, clothes, savings, food, amusements, and so on. They started with the percentages that thousands of budgeteers in their income group have found most workable, made alterations here and there to suit their special needs. You, too, can work out a dollar-stretching budget plan with the help of this booklet.

BOSTON after DARK

(There is more excitement than slight yesterday when Bob Wadlow, the circus lad who runs 8 ft. 10 inches vertical, strides into Holland Hall at St. Elizabeth's and booms a hello to George that nearly bends the walls.

GEORGE HOLLAND

Naturally this is mistaken by Nurse Alice Hennessey for one of the Holland's roars, and she rushes into the cabin like a lady lion only to slow down like a lamb when she sees George has his gang with him.

Two minutes later the room is so filled with parties curious to eye the giant that the Holland is sore ever since that he does not put a man at the gate to pick up a small admission fee.)

Very carefully the mask was packed for shipment, wrapped in soft cloths, buried in excelsior, the box placed in another one, excelsior-filled, and it was brought North . . . # Camera Eye, at Circus, Catches Reactions of Childhood's Big Moments

Ooooh—Ah—Look! Here they come! And there, indeed they did come. In all the glittering splendor of its spangles, grease paint and gilt, the big parade has started. For pure, unadulterated rapture, you are requested to top the look on the face of the child with her elbows on the rail at the Garden when the opening hoopla of Barnum and Bailey, Ringling Brothers' big show opened. It is truly the thrill that comes once in a lifetime.

There she goes! Will he catch her? Will she crash into the safety net far below? Breathless as they watched the "girl on the flying trapeze," these happy boys were caught by the magic eye of the camera.

Rejuvenators attention! The secret of youth, so long locked in mystery, is here revealed for all to see. Can you detect any real difference between the happiness on the faces of the children and those of their mothers? For th meoment, at least, the thrill of the high wire artists, has leveled all ages. The American's magic-eye cameraman, dressed as a clown, caught these human interest "shots" from the arena. The little girl in her mother's arms is a perfect study in uncertainty.

Working with the speed of electricity the machine will correct an examination paper of the true-false or selective question variety and show the grade on a meter, said F. S. Beers, examiner of the University System of Georgia, today.

Beers, who had a hand in promoting the machine's development, said it works on the principle that a soft pencil mark is electrically conductive. Electricity flowing through the pencil marks made by the student causes the recording device to function.

THIS IS LIFE

BY

Robert E. Rogers

Norman Hapgood, who died a few days ago at the age of [illegible] was in his day, an important member of the group of journalists and publicists whom one connects mentally with the "progressive" group of magazine editors and commentators prominent in the age of Theodore Roosevelt and the "muckraking days." Of late years he was less prominent.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

I first met him in the spring of 1906, when a group of ex-Harvard Monthly editors invited the undergraduated board to New York to celebrate the twentieth year of the founding of the paper. There were Robert Herrick the novelist; William Vaughan Moody, poet and dramatist; Percy Mackaye, the late George P. Baker; and (I think) George Santayana as well as Hapgood. He was then in the midst of the most successful period of his career, as editor (from 1903 to 1912) of Collier's successful muckraking magazine.

Work Dates Back

To Early Nineties

Mr Hapgood's work dated back to the early nineties in which such writers as Lincoln Steffens, Ray Stannard Baker, Ida M. Tarbell, Finley Peter Dunne and George Ade made their first marks. He was primarily a journalist of liberal and progressive tendencies. His titles will give an idea of his interests. "Literary Statesmen" and monographs on Washington, Lincoln and Daniel Webster; "The Stage in America" and more recently "Industry and Progress," "The Advancing Hour" and "The Changing Years." He also wrote a little book on Shakespeare, compact but thoughtful, for his young daughter.

After his long period as editor of Collier's he moved to Harper's Weekly for a few years and then was briefly on Hearst's International Magazine. He began his career as dramatic critic, but his most important years were those during Roosevelt's first and second terms and Taft's. He definitely was on the side of the "muckrakers," a progressive and a liberal. Woodrow Wilson rewarded him with the post of minister to Denmark, but the Senate refused to confirm him. He was a hard hitting journalist and editor, and the crowd who came into contact with Harding was not very sympathetic.

The brothers Hapgood were an extraordinary family, exhibiting liberal principles and devoted to putting them into effect. One brother, William, a manufacturer in Indianapolis, stuck to his ideas about business to such an extent that I understand he turned his business over to his employes to own as a co-operate enterprise. William's son Powers is a well known labor agitator and organizer, at present in difficulty with the courts of Maine in his support of the CIO strike in Lewiston and Auburn. Mr. Hapgood's other brother is the philosophcial anarchist Hutchins (Hutch), who for some years now has lived in Provincetown. Norman Hapgood took his liberalism out in literary work.

Wide Experience

Youthful Mind

It is interesting to note what the trustees of the Christian Register of Boston wrote on the occasion of his death. This was the last editorial job Mr. Hapgood held.

"Norman Hapgood entered on the experiment of editing the Christian Register as a challenging spiritual adventurer. His own personal and professional experiences had brought him to the conviction that the time is ripe for a blending of the moral and intellectual values of liberal religion with the knowledge and methods of the world of science. Into this venture he entered with the wisdom of his wide experience and the zeal of his ever-youthful mind."

That last phrase pretty well says it, I think.

The Hapgoods all have big noses, which is supposed to be a sign of strong character. Hutch's nose is big and blunt. Norman's was big and narrow and strongly Roman. He was lean and not very tall. He spoke like a scholar and an analyst rather than an orator. He was clear and specific, his tones a little dry and harsh, his manner that of one thinking aloud, reflective and convinced of his ideas. He was, I think, one of the leading publicists of his generation, who rather outlived the sources of his inspiration. The political thinking of the New Deal rather left him by the wayside.

$50 Awards WEEKLY

OPENS SUNDAY FOR CHILDREN

Now comes a new and fascinating game for children, with $50 awarded each week in prizes but with plenty of fun anyway, even for the youngster who does not succeed in capturing one of the money awards.

Beginning next Sunday, boys and girls up to high school, but not including high school age, will have an opportunity to vie for the 13 prizes each week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser's "World Museum" game.

In the Sunday Advertiser each week will be printed a full page feature in clear, beautiful colors, from which the boys and girls may build dioramas.

And each week for the best diorama a first prize of $15 will be awarded, with a second prize of $10, a third of $5 and 10 prizes of $2 each.

Holling C. Holling, the artist and creator of the [illegible] has written many books for children which he and Mrs. Holling have illustrated.

However, the World Museum and its dioramas means more than were illustrations and short stories. Dioramas, when assembled, give an illusion of third dimensions and distance. They add a sense of realty to a scene that no picture can give.

How It's Done

The dioramas themselves are usually composed of three or more pieces. There is the case front, or frame which represents the front of a museum case at which is the title of the diorama and a description of what it is about.

On the wings or ends of the frame are often drawn supplementary material further explaining more details of the story. Sometimes the center part of the frame folds down to represent ground or water on which the figures in the front [illegible]

[illegible]

The drawing of these dioramas is not at all simple. Mr and Mrs. Holling work rapidly and if it were only an illustration on a flat piece of paper, it would not be difficult. But they must think "in the round"—in other words, they must visualize the entire diorama in its three dimensions before beginning work.

Most of the dioramas follow the departments of a modern museum—geology, or the story of rocks; botany, the story of plants; zoology, the story of animals, and anthropology, the story of man.

The first step in making a diorama, after the subject matter has been decided upon, is to take shears and paper and by folding and cutting Mr and Mrs. Holling work out the mechanical details—an oblong piece in the foreground may turn out to be a heap of rocks or an elephant, a slash in the paper farther back may become a deep canyon.

The background itself may have trap doors and bulges which miraculously turn into a fishing village on a beach or stairs leading to an ancient temple.

Details Drawn in

With these problems out of the way, the rough sketch has its details drawn in colored pencil to check up on perspective.

Now that the rough sketch is out of the way, a complete diorama is made in water color with all the empty spaces filled in.

Now the completed page is before you. With shears, a little paste and some ordinary brown wrapping paper, you can begin assembling a diorama, and when it stands before you completed you yourself have carried out what Mr and Mrs. Holling first visualized with their pencil, paper and shears.

Ruth Mugglebee

The newest diet food, according to friends who are trying it, is goat's milk.

Instead of the proverbial orange juice diet to shrink the stomach and discourage appetite for fattening temptations, goat's milk . . . which they say is sweet, nourishing and medicinal . . . taken several times a day to the exclusion of all other food is supposed to reduce plump proportions to sylph-like slimness.

RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Goats, so I am told, frequent rocks and mountains, and subsist on scanty, coarse food. Maybe it is this reduced desire for food on the animal's part which is psychically transmitted to Milady . . . at any rate, three tall glasses of the nectar every week end is claimed to do the trick and help that girlish figure. I am not a candidate.

Hollywood stars took to goat's milk weekenders long ago . . . Boston stars in their own households are now adopting the fad . . . and with great results I must admit.

Have you ever wondered why you are a blonde, brunette or that irresistible titian-red head? . . . And do you know that the color of the hair is decidedly a race character?

These minute pigment granules in the cells of the hair are responsible for the color . . . at birth your hair is generally light . . . it grows darker and stiffer with age . . . the same is true of your eyelashes and eyebrows . . . and you get grey because there is a deficiency of these pigment granules.

On a large playing field of pyramid design, you struggle and try to race to the top with your four markers . . . you have to shake the dice to do it. Fun and exciting fascination is there. If you like to play games, and who doesn't, this is just the thing . . . you can play for a forfeit, too.

Little Philosophy

For a Change

A little philosophy does not go amiss. Here is some good advice contained in "Confessio Medici," written by Stephen Paget . . . although it applies to doctors, I thought it applied to all people and all life.

"If you must stay, do not stay long, and keep the door of your lips. Talk of the patient, of the weather or of the proposition, which will as surely as the bread and butter be handed to you, that there is a good deal of illness about . . . Avoid all topics of church and state, quote neither poetry nor prose, give neither censure nor approval to music and the drama, hide your liking for any art but your own . . . Leave behind you, for gossip to lap, a saucerful of the milk of human kindness. Never mind about producing a favorable impression; produce this one impression, that you know your work, and that it will not be your fault if the mixture fails to relieve the patient upstairs; and then flee."

PARKING DRIVE ADDS 4 JOBS

The clerk's office in municipal court was preparing for another busy session today, following the handling yesterday of more than 700 motorists who were caught in the no-fixing parking drive.

The number of persons who have reported at the clerk's office to answer summons for parking violations since the drive's inauguration is now 1400.

Clerk William Collins has been obliged to increase his force from three to seven to take care of the offenders. First offenders were only warned, second offenders fined $1 and those caught for the third time paid $2. Fourth or more offenders were told to go home and await summons for hearings and fines.

All Aflutter! Girl Can't Decide on Man She'll Wed

For 23 days, Miss Amato was missing from her home in Webster avenue, Cambridge, and her family and Frank Scalfani, 23, of North street, North End, one of the boy friends, feared she had eloped to New York.

These fears were given foundation two weeks ago when chums of the girl received postcards on which she wrote that she was "honeymooning" with Arnold de Martin, 21, whose home is in DeWolf place, Cambridge, but who works in New York.

BACK AGAIN, GONE AGAIN

She followed the postcards, she said today, with a return to Boston but found so much excitement over the cards that she fled back to Manhattan without seeing her family.

Last night, however, she came back again and declared the whole thing was a prank and she wasn't married at all.

But it's difficult, she declared today, to decide just what to do and to choose between the two boy friends.

To both she has been virtually engaged, and at the time of her disappearance, Scalfani said they had practically decided on a wedding date as summer waned.

DELAYS DECISION

Tonight she will see Scalfani and talk things over. This week end she will see De Martin again and will likewise discuss matters with him.

Only then will she—possibly—make a decision, she said.

CAMBRIDGE MAN BADLY BEATEN

Attacked by an unknown assailant, Robert Adams, 32, of Walden street, Cambridge, lay unconscious in Cambridge City Hospital today, a deep gash in his head. His name is on the danger list.

He recovered consciousness long enough to tell police that he did not know who beat him, that no one had a motive for attacking him, and that no money was taken from his pockets.

A fire was [illegible] over the head [illegible]

He was picked up and taken to the Cambridge Relief station by George Lavelle of Kinnard street, Cambridge.

EL MOTORMAN SUSPENDED

Garfield Perkins, 55, of Brainerd road, Brighton, operator of the Reservoir Beacon car that crashed into a Lake street car in the Tremont street subway, injuring ten persons, was indefinitely suspended today.

Only two of the 10 injured were still in hospitals today, Mrs. Florence Carlson, 40, of Worcester, held at City Hospital, and Mrs. Louise P. Mahoney, 40, of Granville street, Dorchester, at Haymarket Relief.

Perkins was suspended by Elevated President Edward Dana after the report of an investigating committee.

"Investigation showed that the Reservoir car was in safe operating condition and that the Lake street car was visible for 215 feet," Dana said. "The accident was caused by the failure of the operator of the Reservoir car to observe the car ahead soon enough to bring his car to a stop. He has been indefinitely suspended."

Perkins has been with the Elevated for more than 20 years.

Civil Service Test For School Post

The salary range for the post is $1944 to $2808 a year. Applicants must be between 30and 45 years of age and the filing time for applicants closes at noon on May 29.

TRACE VANDALS IN PLYMOUTH

Plymouth May 4 — While state chemists were today working to remove the last vestige of paint from Plymouth Rock, Police Chief Russell R. Dearborn declared that he though he knew the source of the depredation.

Chief Dearborn had traced the red paint, used to blotch the American shrine, to that stolen from a truck not far from the famous rock. The discovery ellminated suspicion from college boy pranksters. Dearborn is now hunting for Plymouth youths who have recently been guilty of upsetting tombstones in local cemeteries.

QUINCY URGES DREDGING FUND

Passage of a bill under which the state and the City of Quincy would pay $136,920 and the Federal government $320,480 for dredging Town river, was urged by a Quincy delegation at a hearing today before the House ways and means committee.

Ex-mayor Thomas J. McGrath of Quincy, said that quibbling over the breakup of the coast should not be allowed to hold up the project which will be of great value in developing the industrial facilities of Quincy's water front.

McGrath suggested that the state and the city should share the cost equally. Other speakers argued that the state should pay $100,000.

WOMAN BANKER GETS PROBATION IN THEFT

Miss Marion Marsters, 35-year-old bank teller, who "played the horses" with $15,979 of the Quincy Trust Company's money, was given probation by Judge Elisha H. Brewter in federal court today.

But if she is not jailed when she is tried by the state on May 27, Judge Brewster stipulated, she must return to the federal jurisdiction for further disposition of her case.

Miss Marsters, who formerly lived in Melville avenue, Dorchester, pleading guilty this morning to the federal indictment brought in connection with the embezzlements.

"WITHOUT MITIGATION"

Assistant U. S. Attorney John A. Canavan urged that she be given an eighteen-month sentence.

"There are no mitigating circumstances, your Honor," he declared. "She did what she did for her own dissipation."

But the woman's counsel, Attorney Benjamin F. Chesky pleaded for clemency on the grounds that his client has been "taken for a ride."

MUST FACE STATE TRIAL

Judge Brewster, after thinking it over, said the case was a state affair and that as long as the defendant has to face larceny charges preferred by Quincy police, he would allow probation.

"But if the defendant isn't committed," he remarked, "she must come back here afterwards. Then we'll see."

Edward B. Finn of Quincy, charged with aiding and abetting in the embezzlement, has pleaded not guilty. His counsel asked for a bill of particulars at the conclusion of Miss Marsters' case. The motion was denied and Finn will go to trial later.

Child in Divorce Suit Delays Trial

Judge Arthur W. Dolan had a 40-minute conference with 13-year-old Dorothy Hotze today to discuss the domestic affairs of her father and mother, then decided on a further delay before the divorce case goes on in Suffolk Court.

The father, Joseph Hotze, also known as 'Hoodsie,' is suing the mother for divorce on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Judge Dolan decided he would question the child after the father said he was agreeable that the child be taken by the mother.

He said he was puzzled by the father's stand in regard to the child, in view of charges he had made against the mother.

Fitzgerald Tells Of 'Gift Contracts'

President John I. Fitzgerald of the Boston City Council, a member of the trustees of the George Robert White Fund, today conferred with George R. Farnum, special Boston Finance Commission investigator. Fitzgerald gave information relative to the granting of alleged "gift contracts" by the trustees to the Codman Hill Construction Company.

It is expected that public hearings on the gift contracts awarded by the trustees will begin on May 17.

GRAND, GLORIOUS NIGHT PINK FINAL FETE TONIGHT

MR. BOSTON

Everybody Up For Pink Dinner! | Ed Don George Back in U. S.

By JACK CONWAY

I AM STEPPING out tonight to the Night Pink Final dinner at the Club Mayfair.

MR. BOSTON

It is the name of the last edition of this newspaper.

The Night Pink Final is the edition that carries all of today's news today. Racing charts, results, entries, selections for the next day, the latest world news and all the famous features of the Boston Evening American.

Writing about the Night Pink Final, I am reminded of the speech District Attorney Bill Foley made at last year's grand party.

"I was walking along Broadway in New York when I met Damon Runyon," said the District Attorney. "I told him I was returning to Boston the next day so that I could attend the Night Pink Final dinner."

"Jack Malloy would think of something new," said Runyon. "A dinner to a newspaper edition, but why not? I know it is the best edition in town with Jack Malloy in charge of it."

Governor Charles F. Hurley was one of the principal speakers at last year's dinner. At the time he was State Treasurer, and told those persons at the party he would be the next Governor.

The Governor, like the Night Pink Final, proved a winner. It is expected that the Governor will also be present tonight.

There will be no extra charges at the Club Mayfair tonight. Benny's only regret is that he will be unable to pick up everybody's check.

ED DON GEORGE RETURNS

Henri DeGlane, also a former world champion, is the top card in Paris. DeGlane engaged in some of his greatest bouts in Boston. He once defeated Gus Sonnenberg at a Christmas Basket Fund show at Braves Field before 30,000 persons. The show drew $56,000.

DeGlane, like most Frenchmen, is European minded, and it is unlikely that he will ever return to the United States to wrestle.

George has been signed by Paul Bowser to appear in the feature bout at the Garden a week from Friday night. Don's opponent has not yet been selected.

RANDOM SHOTS AT TARGET

DAN CARROLL and Dave Breen are taking in the sights in New York after returning to the United States following their tour of France, England and Ireland . . . Dave sent me a postal card picture of Black Rock Castle, Ireland, and remarked: "Ireland is a great country, and I am sure glad I am Irish."

If Lou Brouillard wins over Teddy Yarosz at Mechanics Building on Friday night, he will toss a challenge into the lap of Freddy Steele, world's middleweight champion . . . Al McCoy, who has been taking a peek at Brouillard in training, tells me the Worcester middleweight has been showing exceptionally good form.

BEES Tackle Cards AT HIVE

TAKE SERIES, 2-1, FROM GIANTS

By JOE CASHMAN

The Martins and the Deans and all the rest of that rollicking Gas House Gang from St. Louis are in our midst today.

They're here to engage our battling Bees in a three-round bout which will mark the opening of the first western invasion of the Hive.

As usual, these Cardinals are the pennant favorites. They were last year, too, but the best they could do was finish in a tie for second place. The Bees saw to that.

Our heroes took 13 out of 22 decisions to finish with the best record in the circuit against the Redbirds.

Dean Tomorrow

Which may account for the fact that Manager Frankie Frisch is trotting Lonnie Warneke to the peak today and has the illustrious Jerome "Dizzy" Dean primed to go after his fourth straight win of the season tomorrow.

But if the Fordham Flash thinks his pitching plans have thrown any terror into the ranks of the Boston athletes, he's greatly mistaken.

The McKechniemen's reaction, if Frankie is interested, is that they'll make a clean sweep of the engagement to soar above the second-place visitors in the standing.

And why shouldn't they be that cocky?

They've just taken two out of three from the champion New York Giants, and they've won six of their last eight starts.

Moreover, they have Lou Fette, Jim Turner and Ace Danny MacFayden all set to toss against the [illegible], in the order named.

Boston fans don't know much about Fette and Turner yet. But the Brooklyn and Philadelphia public will tell them that these new Bees boxmen are too good.

Few New Faces

Fette turned back the Dodgers in his only effort. He didn't finish the game but that wasn't surprising. He hadn't worked for almost two weeks previously and the day was bitter cold.

He pitched five sterling stanzas and then, with a big lead, he was told to let up a bit. He went too far in [illegible] however, and Bob Smith had to go to his rescue.

[illegible]

[illegible] start. They've won seven of their [illegible] games and are only a half game back of the roof.

Most of the visiting cast is familiar to local fans. The only newcomers are the [illegible] Mr. Warneke, ex-Cubs right-hander, obtained in exchange for "Tapper" Collins and "Tarzan" Parmelee, [illegible] former Dodger outfielder, who is holding down third base, and "Mickey" Owen, highly touted rookie catcher who is warming the bench.

Weir Cuffs G's

As tough as they are, though, we are telling them they're lucky that they won't have to face Bob "Lefty" Weir on this visit.

The mighty mite from Melrose pitched the Monday piece against the Giants and what he did to the champions had the stolid, unemo-

Daffy Faces Operation

St. Louis, May 4 (AP)—Paul Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff made arrangements today to enter a hospital for an operation, either tomorrow or Thursday, on his injured right shoulder.

Dr. Robert Hyland, Cardinal club surgeon, who will perform the operation, declined to discuss the younger Dean's chance of being restored to his former hurling efficiency.

The Great Dizzy Dean cutting loose with that fast one. Dean, who is here with the St. Louis Cardinals, will attend the Night Pink Final dinner of the Boston Evening American at Benny Ginsburg's Club Mayfair tonight and will toe the mound against the Bees tomorrow.

Heavy Rains Hinder Derby Candidates

Louisville, Ky., May 4 (AP)—An overnight rain and threat of still more moisture played havoc with the plans of the Kentucky Derby trainers, but it did not stop Samuel Riddle's War Admiral, the favorite, from turning in an excellent workout in his final prep for Saturday's renewal of the $50,000 stake.

Working alone because of the illness of his stablemate, Army and Navy, the son of Man o' War went the full Derby route of a mile and a quarter in 2.08 3-5 over a slow track. George Conway, veteran trainer of the colt, was well pleased with the trial, especially in view of the fact that War Admiral is not considered a good work horse and has no liking for mud.

With an exercise boy in the saddle, War Admiral was clocked in :12 2-5 for the first eighth of a mile, :50 for the half mile, 1.15 4-5 for six furlongs and 1.42 3-5 for the mile.

R. E. (Dick) Handlen, trainer of William duPont Jr.'s Fairy Hill, scratched the Santa Anita Derby winner from the Derby "trial" this afternoon and then worked him the Derby distance in 2.08 4-5. Also running, Fairy Hill went the half in :48 3-5, the three-quarters in 1.14 3-5.

Frank Kearns also said he would declare Warren Wright's Galsun and Gosum out of the "trial" if the track remained muddy, in which case neither would start in the Derby.

Mary Hirsch, owner and trainer of No Sir, said she did not want to run her Derby hope this afternoon but was forced to in order to determine the extent of a minor foot injury suffered during a workout last week. The horse showed no signs of lameness after a gallop this morning, however.

With the exception of E. W. Duffy's Grey Gold, all the other Derby candidates confined their workouts to gallops. Grey Gold, a doubtful starter Saturday, went a mile and an eighth in 1.57 1-5 handily after stepping the six furlongs in 1.16 1-5 and the mile in 1.43 3-5.

Earl Sande Lacks Jockey for Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 4 (AP)—The Earl is in town again.

It's been five years since the great Sande visited Churchill Downs, but the "hardboots" will never forget the handy guy from Idaho who rode three Kentucky Derby winners.

They speak his name almost in reverence when recalling the deeds of Derby greats.

Earl is not here to ride in the 63d running of the Derby. Their days are over. But he has two horses in Sceneshifter and Fencing that may have something to say about the division of the $50,000 purse late Saturday afternoon.

"They've got an outside chance," said Sande today as he watched his horses breeze over the Churchill Downs oval. "Yes, I'd say they have a little better than an outside chance."

Sande always considered Sceneshifter the better of the two until Fencing whipped E. R. Bradley's Billionaire and Brooklyn in the mile and an eighth of the Blue Grass stakes at Keeneland last week. Now he's not so sure, although Sceneshifter consistently outworks his stablemate.

Castoffs

Both of his horses are castoffs. He bought them for Maxwell Howard of Dayton, Ohio, from J. E. Widener last winter in Florida. Once in the capable hands of the Earl they began to really step after mediocre two-year-old careers.

Sceneshifter failed to run to expectations in the Flamingo stakes at Hialeah Park but a few days later came within a fraction of Brevity's track record of 1.48 1-5 for a mile and an eighth. He is said to have finished out the Derby distance of a mile and a quarter in less than 2.02. If true, that's clipping for Twenty Grand's mark of 2.01 4-5 in the Derby record.

The former jockey [illegible] is something of a quandary, however. He thought he had Jimmy Stout to ride Sceneshifter Saturday. Now he hears the New Jersey veteran, who was tossed from Granville last year, will be unable to leave New York due to a previous riding engagement. That leaves Sande with two jockeys to get, and good jockeys do not hang on trees five days before the Derby.

Won With Zev

"Looks like I'm going to have to hit the road," he said jokingly.

At that, the Earl doesn't look much different from the jockey who rode John Hay Whitney's Overtime into fourth place five years ago in his Derby farewell.

As an apprentice he rode in the classic for the first time in 1918. [illegible] Sande didn't return until 1923 when he won with Harry F. Sinclair's Zev. He thought he [illegible] with Flying Ebony [illegible] gave the [illegible] Butler.

Agawam Handicap Tops First Day Card There

Springfield, May 4—The opening feature on the 29th day of May at picturesque Agawam Park will be the Agawam Handicap, it was announced by [illegible] Secretary [illegible]

It will be a six furlong sprint for three-year-olds and upwards, and is certain to attract E. F. Sweet's Veto Boy and other fine thoroughbreds. The Agawam Cap will be for an added purse of $1000.

General Manager Eddie Brennan announced today that William H. Ensign of Westfield, former member of the Massachusetts Racing Commission and retired box manufacturer, has accepted the post of associate steward at Agawam.

The appointment of Ensign completes the list of stewards who will guide the destinies of Agawam, New England's youngest track. George E. Brown [illegible] of Baltimore, Md., one of the most noted figures in racing, will serve as presiding steward while acting with Ensign will be Wilmer Brinton Jr.

Ensign, whose home is in nearby Westfield, is a well known sportsman. His appointment was hailed on all sides as one of the most constructive moves made to date by the new deal management headed by Treasurer Dan Garnett and Managing Director Eddie Brennan.

Bor Record Fails to Faze Carroll

Nat Bor of Fall River runs into a human buzz-saw Thursday night at Egleston Square Stadium when he meets Eddie Carroll, Lowell, in the main 10-round bout of Eddie Mack's boxing show.

Carroll is in top condition and will give Bor all he wants.

Carroll knows all about the Bor record. Nat has won 47 of 49 professional fights—but apparently is not the least bit awed.

It will be Bor's first appearance in Boston as a professional but he needs no introduction here. He carried on a brilliant feud with Jimmy McCarron several years ago when an amateur.

Bor beat McCarron in every start and was the U. S. 135 pound representative in the 1932 Olympic games in Los Angeles, beating McCarron for the right to fight for the Stars and Stripes against boxers from other nations.

KNOW WHAT TOP-RUN MEANS TO BOURBON FLAVOR ?

This diagram shows the curve of quality. It pictures how the peak of whiskey goodness is secured by cutting off the raw "heads" and the heavy "tails"—and taking only the best of the run to make Crab Orchard.

The answer to that is Crab Orchard—for this genial bourbon is made like the costliest whiskies. It's all TOP-RUN—warming as sunshine, gentle as a southern breeze, real Kentucky all the way through. It has the extra brilliance, extra bead quality, extra flavor, extra strength because it's full 93 proof. Taste it—and its thrifty price will be doubly welcome.

Di Mag Went From 205 to 160 Pounds In Half Season With Tucson, Ariz.

(This is the third of a series of articles by Vince DiMaggio, Bees rookie sensation, on how he made the big league grade.)

By VINCE DiMAGGIO

(As told to Joe Cashman)

Like most youngsters, I discovered there was a world of difference between performing in semi-pro ranks and playing in a Class AA minor league.

I wasn't in training a week with the San Francisco Seals in the spring of 1932 before I realized I wasn't ready for such fast company.

So I was neither surprised nor [illegible] when I was farmed [illegible] the Seals' farm at Tucson, [illegible] before the season opened. [illegible] was managed by Mickey [illegible] who had discovered me in [illegible]. He acted as a [illegible] and farm pilot [illegible]

[illegible]

Vince DiMaggio was knocked down and dazed as he was hit on the head by Lou Chiozza's elbow when the latter leaped into the air to take a throw to third by Mancuso. DiMaggio recovered almost instantly. The play took place in the final game between the Bees and Giants.

[illegible] of the best things that ever happened to me.

At 205 pounds, I was about 25 pounds above my normal weight and far too slow of foot to get anywhere in baseball.

I didn't have enough strength to show at my best when I fell off to 160, but I quickly put on [illegible] pounds when I returned to cover [illegible] climes and have kept at that weight ever since.

Every season furnishes a ball player one game that stands out in his memory, and my short season in Tucson was no exception.

Nothing has ever [illegible] of the lot. I got a kick just from reading about the feats of leading home run sluggers.

My idol in my early days wasn't Tony Lazzeri, Joe Cronin or any of the other 'Frisco boys making [illegible]

[illegible] first season there. The Seals [illegible]

[illegible] at the corner now. My brief taste of outfielding had convinced me [illegible]

I mention that because of the part he played in by brother Joe's pro debut which I will tell you about tomorrow.

1937 STUDEBAKER MAKES DRIVING A PLEASURE

Test No. 7

Studebaker President Designed for Safety, Style, Thrift and Joys of Riding

By HERBERT D. WILSON

JAMES H. DODGE

Automobile Editor

In the belief that most of our readers are interested in the performance characteristic of certain automobile models, we have held a series of conversations with Herbert D. Wilson, nationally known performance tester of the Hearst organization, who has just completed personal tests of the 1937 automobiles.

His reactions will be set down in detailed stories that will form a weekly feature in the Boston Evening American.

ONE OF THE RICHEST MEN IN THE WORLD, THE NIZAM of Hyderabad, is reputed to have about $150,000,000 in [illegible] $1,400,000,000 in lands, gold and capital of [illegible]

[illegible]

Performance, Major Specifications

ACCELERATION — With the wind, 20 to 60 miles an hour in high gear, 14 seconds; against the wind, 20 to 60 miles an hour in high gear, 14 1-15 seconds.

ENGINE. — 8-cylinder. Bore and stroke, 3 1-16x4¾. Piston displacement, 250.4 cubic inches. Taxable horsepower, 30. Maximum brake horsepower, 115 at 3600 revolutions per minute.

COMPRESSION RATIO—6.50.

REAR AXLE GEAR RATIO—(5-passenger, 4-door sedan), 4.55.

TIRE SIZE—6.50x16.

WHEELBASE—125 inches.

Luxurious interiors combined with exterior smartness and distinctiveness mark the Studebaker President as one of the outstanding cars of 1937. The car is powered by a 115-horsepower engine and is sprung with Studebaker's exclusive wheel suspension. It is notable that not a single breakage of any part of the planar system has yet been reported by any of the thousands of Studebaker owners.

A Real Grind

Roadbed Race

Another time three Studebakers were driven at high speed in a race with the Dixie Flyer, not on a concrete road, but instead the cars were driven down the roadbed on the ties showing the sturdiness of Studebaker planar front end suspension.

New Door Lock

Interiors, including the [illegible] hardware, the upholstery on seats, doors and ceilings, have all been done by Miss Helen [illegible], well known New York designer, and show a harmony of color and form. Then too the interior compartments, both front and rear, are very roomy, not only in leg room, but head room also. Door openings are higher, seats are wider and conform to body requirements.

[illegible]

To me one of the most interesting improvements on the 1937 models is the invention of a new door lock. This is the first completely new type of door fastening [illegible] that has been introduced into the industry [illegible]

Once closed, the mechanism is so constructed that movements of the body or rough roads automatically tighten the lock, thus compensating for wear and preventing rattles due to looseness.

Quick Change

[illegible] a feature of the automatic overdrive which makes it operative when the highest gear is engaged. You are familiar with the manner in which one shifts into overdrive by simply [illegible] the foot from the accelerator and pressing down again gradually when driving at speeds above 35 miles per hour.

The new feature of the Studebaker President overdrive lies in the driver's ability to change back into conventional third by simply raising the foot from the accelerator and depressing it again quickly instead of [illegible]

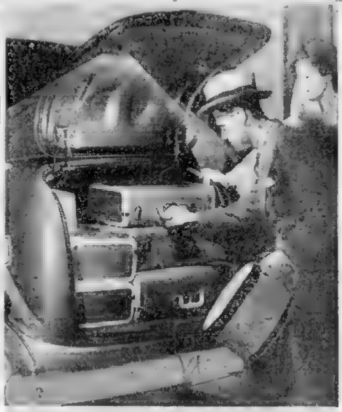
In speaking of hills, it will be remembered that Studebaker pioneered the automobile "hill-holder" which is again a feature on the 1937 models.

The "hill holder" operates in the following manner: When it is to a dead stop on a hill, instead of being forced to apply the brake [illegible] necessary to shift after coming [illegible]



The twenty-two cubic foot luggage space in the trunk sedans is one of the largest compartments found in any car this year. One of the reasons for the excess space is the new flat gasoline tank. Note also the non-pinching hinges and interior light.

Economical, Too

The car is economical, too, as proven [illegible] the tests under the A. A. A. [illegible] Studebaker President [illegible] at approximately 35 miles an hour with a gasoline consumption of more than 23 miles per gallon.

[illegible] obtained better than twenty-two miles per gallon and at fifty-five miles an hour, better than eighteen miles per gallon. This is real economy.

Although our cold weather seems to be behind us for the present season [illegible] glass and prevent frost or cloudiness from hampering the driver's vision. I think that any one who has tried out these defrosters will never want to be without them.

EARLIER EFFORT

Important by all means is to report the first of a brand-new and expected to be hand-up [illegible] of half-hour impressions (WNAC), due to be launched locally between 7:30 and 8 o'clock tonight.

They get started tonight and will be heard as news dramatizations each Tuesday henceforth at the same time.

Outstanding events in the headlines are to be presented in a cast of trained microphone actors and actresses, to be directed by Lucia Travers, production ace of the Yankee Network broadcasts.

These weekly offerings will be vivid and realistic, according to Travers, and highlights of the news New England news can be counted on for presentation with Fred Bishop assisting in the studio staging.

The dramatization of news is something long anticipated through these thickets. Methinks it's likely to win a way readily with the air audience for the fact that it is a decidedly unique departure, embracing every opportunity for wide and enthusiastic reception.

When Al Jolson portrays the Mexican chieftain of the highly dramatic "Viva Villa" opus (WEEI) tonight at 8:30 p. m., author Edgcumb Pinchon will be on hand to double-check the authenticity of the atmosphere created.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

20 BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1937

HANEY ON ECONOMICS

Few Troublesome SIGNS IN BUSINESS Now Noted Here

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, May 4—Business conditions during the past week may be well described as "unsettled." Probably the outstanding factor was the disturbance in "sentiment," which, as usual, followed events in the stock market. The notable weakness in speculative commodities increased the disturbance.

It cannot be said that such a relapse will show business as a whole, for example, that part of business which consists in the maintenance of actual requirements.

Furthermore, the condition, resulting from over-extended speculation in commodities, which existed in England, is serious enough. There will be required to restore equilibrium in that quarter, to relieve the strain on credit. Repercussions from this situation seem to be the chief unfavorable factor to be watched.

* * *

There are favorable signs, however, of important trouble on this score. The new great stimulation of forward buying prior to the recent advance would be a bull. But I can find little indication of such orders that are seriously out of line with probable requirements. The conservative and efficient secretary of the National Association of Purchasing Agents announces that there is little speculative forward buying among the numerous members of his organization. Therefore little cancellation is expected.

* * *

None of the recognized observers of affairs in the iron and steel industry finds evidence of troublesome accumulations of steel products or finished steel. Certainly there are none in the case of pig iron.

What is going on in this country, aside from the selling from the stock market, is partly the natural result of the termination of certain movements which operated during the winter and spring. There is also political interference in the shape of threats of new taxes. These threats, we may assume, are intended partly to hold the boom in check so that the Administration can keep the country from getting into a panic. Also to keep the country from getting into a panic against government spending and threats of taxes on relief.

There is a great deal of politics is mixed with business, and in order to understand one must know about the plans of the politicians.

* * *

Business continues active and will probably show some gains allowing for seasonal variations. It is now in the seasonal peak. To hold the present level floods and strikes and reduced production are an excellent showing.

The passing the usual peak of automobile assemblies has not yet been made but there is a strong prospect that production will be maintained for another month or two, thus making up for the losses lost during the big strikes.

The fact remains that the business picture seems to be clouded by floods, cold weather, the reaction in stocks and these have slowed up and made irregular the progress made by department stores. Wholesale trade, however, has been slowed up by price declines. As to prices the wholesale averages were off but a trifle last week after a wave of selling, the markets steadied and some recoveries were higher. But copper, steel scrap, cotton, wool, rubber, silk and tin were lower. On the other hand, some of the commodities showed that signs of stabilization were apparent.

* * *

Perhaps this is the way the banks took the May 1 settlements. They met the situation easily. Loans were withdrawn from New York and some borrowing elsewhere as well as at the reserve banks, resulted. The movement, however, and there has actually been a gain in deposits.

On the whole I would say that the business news warrants the belief that no more than a minor reaction in business is to be expected even this will depend chiefly upon the restriction of wages and taxes which the administration decides to adopt.

KNUDSEN Elected G. M. HEAD

SLOAN CHOSEN CHAIRMAN

New York, May 4 (US) —William S. Knudsen was elected president of the $400,000,000 General Motors Corporation yesterday afternoon to succeed Alfred P. Sloan, Jr.

Knudsen was for several years executive vice-president of General Motors and in that capacity was largely instrumental in the settlement of the recent disastrous strike that tied up the huge plants of the company and its subsidiaries and threw about 125,000 out of work.

It was stated that Knudsen will assume complete responsibility in the administration of all the corporation's operating divisions and subsidiaries.

The elections were announced following a meeting of the board of directors of General Motors, at which a quarterly dividend of $1 a share was declared on the common stock of the company, as compared with a 25-cent dividend three months ago.

Knudsen was born in Copenhagen in 1897. He came to America when 20 and worked for the gas engine and power company and Erie Railroad and then joined the John R. Keim mills in Buffalo.

After considerable shop experience, he was made factory manager of the Keim Mills which was merged with the Ford Motor Company in 1911.

In 1913 Knudsen entered the Ford motor plant in Detroit. Later he was in charge of production in the Ford Detroit plant. During the World War he was in charge of Ford boat building activities.

In 1919 he installed three European assembly plants for Ford, and two years later he joined the Leland & Matthews Company of Detroit. In 1922, he joined the General Motors Corporation in an advisory capacity. Soon afterward he was made vice-president of Chevrolet.

On January 15, 1924, he was elected president and general manager of Chevrolet and made vice-president and director of the General Motors Corporation.

He was appointed executive vice-president of General Motors on October 16, 1933.

Executive Board Completely Revamped

New York, May 4 (INS)—A completely revamped executive board was in control of General Motors Corporation today.

Sweeping changes saw General Motors' finance and executive committees abolished, and a policy committee and an administration committee with well-defined duties created. With Alfred P. Sloan, Jr. as chairman of both.

Elimination of the finance and executive committees carried with it a reduction in the representation of the Morgan and duPont interests in executive capacities in General Motors affairs. At the same time, several of the less active officers were dropped and replaced by other men on the two new committees.

Among other changes, Donaldson Brown, formerly vice-president and chairman of the finance committee, was elected vice-chairman of the board. Marvin E. Coyle, general manager of the Chevrolet Motor division, and Floyd O. Tanner, who will deal with labor relationships as a member of the general staff, were elected vice-presidents of the corporation.

Banks Sell U. S. Issues

On the last day of March, 1937, reporting Federal Reserve member banks in 101 cities had total liquid assets of $28,700,000,000. Of this amount, $20,300,000,000, or 71 per cent, was invested in direct obligations to the United States government. Another 15 per cent of these assets was classified as "direct loans to customers," otherwise called commercial loans. The remainder of the assets, 14 per cent, was distributed among other investments and loans and cash.

This chart shows the trend of these assets at varying periods during the past few years. U. S. government securities accounted for the largest single portion of assets in June, 1936, when holdings of these obligations amounted to $18,510,000,000, or 39 per cent.

From the end of 1936 to the end of March, 1937, U. S. government security holdings dropped $2,661,000,000. During this same period commercial loans increased $171,000,000. Since total liquid assets of the banks were up slightly during the three-month period, the remainder of the reduction in U. S. government security holdings naturally went into "other assets."

New York, May 4—A clearer understanding of the Federal Reserve System's purchase of nearly $3,000,000,000 government securities the six months ended April 28 is to be found in statement of reporting member banks in 101 leading cities, showing they sold $69,000,000 of direct governments in that secondary period.

Heaviest sales were made outside New York. Chicago district holdings dropped $18,000,000, Richmond $12,000,000, and San Francisco $11,000,000. Only a $4,000,000 decline was recorded by New York reporting member banks.

The heavy sale of governments could be accounted for to some extent by preparations for the May 1 increase in reserve requirements.

WALL ST. SIDELIGHTS

April Rail Net Jumps Is Forecast

New York, May 4—Prospects of a 25 per cent increase in earnings of class I railroads as a whole in April, compared with a year ago, were seen by Hoit, Rose & Troster after a study of the month's loadings trends.

Railway earnings of $[illegible] in March represented the best showing for that month since 1929 and resulted in full coverage of fixed charges by the carriers in the aggregate in the first quarter.

Statistician Has A Word for It

Discussing the widely prevalent trend of population to urban districts and its influence on railroad traffic, with particular reference to the new excise profits tax, which is causing British lines to increase payments. It is now more customary to declare payments at quarterly meetings, keeping such payments with in a conservative earnings range. Toward the end of the year, the directorates intend to "clear up" dividends, either favoring the stockholders or the government. In Great Britain for many years it has been the custom of [illegible] to pass [illegible] dividends equivalent to [illegible]

Sees 'Extravagance' In TVA Project

Power revenues of the Tennessee Valley Authority, based on Director Lilienthal's forecast of $11,500,000 for 1934 indicate $1 of gross income per property investment for $45, according to a study by the Financial World. This was compared with $1 of gross expected by the Federal Power Commission from each $7.50 of investment in hydro plants. The total cost of the completed Tennessee Valley Authority project is expected to reach $520,000,000. The analysis pointed out that the Tennessee Valley Authority project [illegible] 22 per cent of [illegible] which the [illegible]

would have to pay in operating expenses, depreciation, interest on bonds and taxes. The study pointed out, however, that the cost of the Tennessee Valley Authority project is "arbitrarily allocated" to flood control, navigation and national defense" with only a minor portion [illegible] the cost of power [illegible]

Horse Car Revived By Annual Report

People who like to revivify something thought moribund might turn to page 21 of the annual report for [illegible] Tennessee Electric Power Company. We hasten to say that such report has nothing whatever to do with the Tennessee Valley Authority because the company and the Authority have been so openly and directly opposed to each other that the public mind is inclined to think of them simultaneously. It goes much further than that. Listed in the statement of funded debt is the [illegible] McClintock & Marshall Horse Railroad Company first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds due [illegible] $305,000. # FOREIGN Trade RECORD

THEORISTS' VIEWS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

New York, May 4—Although our theorists still exhort Americans to import more, the records show that in the first quarter Americans imported $113,959,000 more merchandise than they exported.

Yet only last Thursday Secretary Wallace, speaking before the National Council of Importers and Traders in New York, declared:

"If we are to export more American goods, we must purchase more goods from abroad."

What the secretary said is quite true, but it does not point out that way in practice. Buyers elected to use their [illegible] purchasing power [illegible] resulting from American gold and silver imports, to acquire American securities and bank deposits, rather than corresponding increase their purchases of American agriculture, and [illegible] products.

Likewise while many [illegible] try to pay existing debts because of poverty [illegible] were enabled, in the [illegible] of American investments.

BRITISH FREE TRADE

When international [illegible] are held, the British [illegible] their own economic [illegible] while they do not [illegible] with a position [illegible] Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations. The British practised free trade as long as they considered it advantageous.

As one practical economist remarked: "Since the so-called 'classical' economic doctrine of international trade was developed primarily in Great Britain in the late 18th and 19th centuries it is well to note that consciously or unconsciously these doctrines were an expression of national self interest.

"Britain was leading the world in manufactures, but had a shortage of essential raw materials, hence it was good policy to advocate 'free trade or 'tariff for revenue only,' so that, while receiving her raw materials at the lowest possible price, she might also export her manufactured goods to foreign countries under the most favorable conditions.

"However, whenever the British have decided that this policy was no longer advantageous, they have not hesitated to impose heavy import duties, and during the past five years substantial tariffs have been levied on the importation of most manufactured goods, the average rate collected on all imports being even higher than the average rate collected in the United States."

PLAY SMALLER ROLE

Exports play a smaller role in national prosperity in the United States than in most other countries. American export trade normal years [illegible] about 5 per cent of [illegible] production and brings forth 5 per cent to 6 per cent of the national income. [illegible] primarily [illegible] exports frequently [illegible] 10 per cent of national income.

For sixty years the ratio of agricultural exports has been declining. Around 1880, 80 per cent of exports were agricultural products. In the last boom years [illegible] declined to [illegible] per cent. [illegible]

Farm Machinery Exports Gain

United States exports of agricultural implements and machinery increased in March to $6,501,241, the highest since April, 1931, and 58 per cent over March 1936, statistics of $4,740,265 according to the Department of Commerce.

Foreign sales of tractors and parts during the month were valued at $4,643,721, [illegible] per cent of the total farm equipment exports and 76 per cent [illegible] from March 1936 shipments valued at $2,644,213.

Higher Dividends Likely in 1937

Further expansion this year in railroad dividend payments is foreshadowed by the increase in net income already registered over 1936 and by the favorable outlook for further gains the balance of the year.

With earnings gains especially pronounced in March, by the end of the first quarter, the amount of net income, on a 12 months' basis, potentially available for dividends, was already considerably higher than for the calendar year 1936.

Furthermore excluding the three roads in this group which were the most seriously affected by the Ohio River floods in January and February, the net income of the 12 remaining carriers for the 12 months ended March 31 was 18.2 per cent greater than the total reported for the year 1936. Dividends paid to these 26 companies in the year 1936 amounted to $132,343,098.

BOOM WARNINGS

Spending By Governments Deplored

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The Bank of International Settlements has added its authoritative voice to those already lifted in warning against a new world boom that would be followed by another crash.

Regardless of private thoughts and sentiments on the question of a boom's imminence, the bank's comments on extraordinary public works and armament expenditures will be well received by all thinking people.

While public speculation may have played quite a part in the rises obtained to date, government policies throughout the world are the real danger spot, in this writer's opinion. And it is good to know some one has the courage to say so. Especially after the warnings from political oracles who are so prone to overlook their own failings in spending easy come, easy go tax money, or, even worse, the spoils from coin clipping and the proceeds of bond issues. But while on the subject of boom talk let us remember human frailty. For that characteristic results in crying wolf at the wrong time while accounting for "new era" philosophies when excesses abound. So with all the world on guard we think boom dangers are quite remote.

* * *

Time and again we hear investors complain that the art of making money work is a secret closely held by a favored few that the average person is never permitted to explore. The Reserve Management Corp., a division of Brookmire, strips the subject of imaginary secrecy in a new book entitled "Investment Management and Portfolio Control." The coverage of the human equation is particularly interesting. The personal pitfalls which, in varying degrees, face individual investors are listed as greed, hope, pride of opinion and impatience. These emotional factors are listed along with the temptation to accept superficial advice as responsible for so many market failures.

* * *

It would be entirely possible to write a sermon on the human equation in investment covered in Investment Management and Portfolio Control. And if individuals would do it for themselves many losses and heartaches of the market place would be banished.

* * *

The chances seem to favor an extension of the rally in the markets before a real secondary setback takes place. Accordingly we strongly suggest that readers postpone all new purchases until the lows of the intermediate decline have been thoroughly tested. The proper policy at this point calls for a lightening of accounts on further strength. Stocks that do not rally well together with those situations that no longer appear attractive for the pull should be liquidated. In this way cash will be secured with which to do buying later on.

* * *

In a rough way we think that the Dow Jones industrial index may climb back to levels around 178. The figure represents a full technical retracement of ground lost and if bettered at all it will be at the expense of the market's technical position.

* * *

Notebook: The summary of stock transactions for the later part of March published by the SEC shows a reversal of investment trends by officers and directors and principal stockholders . . . Buying tendencies replaced selling operations, so clearly in evidence through the winter months . . . To our mind this is about as welcome a sign as the average stock buyer could ask for . . . And the availability of the information is one of the best things that ever happened insofar as the man-on-the-street is concerned . . . And he should avail himself of the opportunity to keep abreast of informed opinion.

MARKET Trend UPWARD

DULL TRADING CONTINUES

New York, May 4— Slow but persistent bidding today added gains of fractions to 3 or more points to the stock market's industrial leaders.

Profit selling cropped up occasionally and cut down extreme advances in many instances, but most favorites were not far from their tops at the close.

Prominent on the push were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, General Motors, Chrysler, Mack Truck, U. S. Rubber, Goodrich, Marshall Field, Caterpillar Tractor, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light, North American, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, International Nickel, Coca-Cola, Standard Oil of N. J., Texas Corp., Barnsdall, Howe Sound, Phelps Dodge, Canada Dry, National Cash Register, American Cahin an Loew's.

Narrow but usually improved were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Illinois Central, American Can, Seaboard Oil, Socony Vacuum and General Electric.

Bonds and commodities were quiet, but the majority were on the advancing side.

Current Items

Among other factors of interest to market followers were forecasts of trade observers that retail distribution this month should exceed that of May, 1936, by about ten per cent.

Tending to hold down the rate of gain, however, is the fact the month will have one less shopping day than a year ago. Merchants feel much spring demand, because of abnormal weather prevailing in the past several weeks, has yet to be filled, and are counting on this to help step up sales.

Reports from farm implement makers indicate that, despite sharp increases in production in this field, principal manufacturers are still far behind on deliveries. Barring crop failures, it was thought machinery sale sthis year will top the 1936 total by as much as 25 per cent.

The French franc was off .01¼ of a cent at 4.50 cents in initial foreign exchange transactions. Sterling was up 1-16 of a cent at $4.93⅝.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

May Be Largest Ever for 1st Half

Observing that earnings of many corporations for the first six months of 1937 are likely to be the largest ever reported, Estabrook & Co. members of the New York Stock Exchange, point out in the current edition of their "Review" that favorable prospects are not lacking for the longer term, as well.

Observing that earnings of many corporations for the first six months of 1937 are likely to be the largest ever reported, Estabrook & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, point out in the current edition of their "Review" that favorable prospects are not lacking for the longer term, as well.

"Looking beyond the near-term, the outlook for business and the markets in late summer and fall is far from clear. Many observers expect a moderate recession in industry by that time . . . On the other hand, it is conceivable that by fall agriculture may be in a position to shoulder some of the weight of the economic structure now carried by industry.

"A large acreage has been sown to wheat, and according to report, moisture conditions in both the Southwest and Northwest are the most favorable for many years. Since surplus stocks of agricultural comomdities have been largely eliminated, the prospect is excellent that the country, for the first time since the depression started, will harvest large crops at high prices. Weather conditions, of course, will be a determining influence on the crops and will need to be followed carefully by the investing community."

The "Review" includes charts showing comparative trends during the first three months of 1936 and 1937 in steel ingot production, carloadings, estimated automobile production, electric power production, aggregate industrial production and in prices for bonds, stocks and comomdities.

MARKET Sat. Closing LOOMS

STEP SEEN AS PROGRESSIVE

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, May 4 (INS) —As a matter of public relations and general good will right in its own backyard, the New York Stock Exchange by closing on Saturdays—at least in the summer months—can take a long progressive step forward.

The little commodity boards in the financial district are already pointing the way. The cocoa exchange has started the ball rolling, initiating this last Saturday.

The law committee is made up of 11 stock exchange members and partners who are also governors or governing members and five from its outside advisory committee, or "brain trust." The advisory committee is a group of business and industrial men who have been invited to help the exchange in its general relations policies.

Law Committee

The law committee sets the policies for the exchange. While the members can circulate petitions for Saturday closings, or any other holiday, if the law committee members don't approve, the exchange stays open.

The committee as it is now set up—there may be some big changes there after the elections on May 10 —is headed by E. H. H. Simmons, boom-time president of the stock exchange and at present its vice-president.

There is a possibility Simmons may step down as vice-president. He is elected to this office by the board of governors, not the membership, and the board of governors at this coming election is going so-called New Deal. He probably will stay on the law committee.

Next to Simmons in command on the law committee is Richard Whitney, who succeeded Simmons as president of the stock exchange after 1929 and had the misfortune to be in office during the bear market and the Senate investigations. He was replaced by Charles Gay. Like Simmons, he is rated as a member of the old guard. He also will probably continue on the new law committee.

Toner Elected to New Edison Post

Directors of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston today elected James V. Toner as assistant treasurer and auditor of the company.

Mr. Toner, who has been a certified public accountant since 1921, a member of the American Institute of Accounts, and nationally known as an author and teacher in accounting subjects, has been auditor of the company since April 1.

President Frank D. Comerford informed the directors that the change in the name of the company to Boston Edison Co. will become effective July 15.

Relief INVESTIGATION Urged

By B. C. FORBES

Is it possible that those who are drawing salaries to handle relief are not eager to have relief activities ended? Bureaucracy often develops into barnacles, refusing to be separated from the public payroll.

The following experience described by one highly responsible reader prompts the foregoing and suggests the need for thoroughgoing investigation of the whole gigantic relief machinery maintained at such staggering cost by the federal government, by taxpayers:

"Today I was visiting a builder friend who is doing a construction job for the government. Needing additional help, he sent a request to the U. S. Department of Labor employment office in an industrial city in Pennsylvania for a dozen laborers. He showed me the reply, stating that no laborers could be supplied.

"In that very city the government is spending much money on relief for the so-called unemployed.

"This means that the government is paying men not to work. Surely any able-bodied men refusing work when offered should be removed from relief rolls."

One excuse often mentioned for not accepting employment is that the job might prove only temporary and that, once off relief, it isn't easy to get on again. Apparently, many relief recipients look upon their present status as permanent, as insuring them easy money for life.

If it be true that men are genuinely afraid of undue truble in getting back on relief should real need arise, and if this fear is resulting in keeping relief rolls unnecessarily lengthy, the rules and regulations obviously should be changed. Men should be encouraged to find and take self-supporting jobs, not to avoid them.

In face of looming Federal deficits, Washington, so fond of "investigating," should promptly investigate how relief offices are being run, with a view of weeding out unneeded employes and, wherever feasible, closing offices that have outlived their usefulness.

Why so many millions should continued to be classified as unemployed after our sustained period of reviving prosperity is as baffling as it is disappointing and costly to taxpayers. Palpably, something is wrong somewhere.

* * *

Most businesses move heaven and earth to fill an order. Rightly or wrongly, complaints often are made that railroads do not seem to act equally vigilantly and resourcefully to fill orders, that too often the prospective rail traveler is told there are no accommodations left on the train he wants. And that's that.

Oftener than once when higher-ups were informed all that was necessary was an order to add another car.

Only the other day a southern transportation office, run (so far as I know) by an important railroad, told me there was no hurry to make reservations. To my amazement, the very next morning, when I gave my order, I was told it couldn't be filled.

Most railway highest-ups are now doing a better, more enterprising job than ever before. But could not some system be devised whereby all applications for reservations which cannot be furnished by local ticket sellers be communicated immediately to the nearest division having someone with authority to do other than the absolutely routine? In this way unfilled orders could at least sometimes be filled in accordance with the wishes of patrons and without excessive cost.

One large corporation recently canceled its advertising because a strike made deliveries temporarily impossible. When the strike ended it sent further cancellations because of banked-up orders on hand!

How different a policy is followed by one of America's most successful enterprises, the Coca Cola Company. Says President R. W. Woodruff:

"An intensified marketing campaign is being continued, including an advertisin program at the ing an advertising program at the company. In this initial year of its half century, Coca-Cola experienced its greatest domestic consumption and broadest foreign development."

15 Hub Children Reported Missing

Fifteen children were reported missing in Greater Boston today as the annual visit of the circus and the first warm days of spring hit this vicinity.

With most of the missing children local boys, the Boston missing persons bureau confined its investigation to the vicinity of the North Station, where the circus is holding sway this week.

State highways were being carefully watched for youthful travelers as the state police received calls from all over New England to be on the lookout for boys and girls ranging between the ages of 12 and 16.

SHOOTING TIP WINS AWARD

By The News Tip Editor

On his day off and making a friendly visit, Patrolman Thomas G. Supple of the Fields Corner station was shot in the stomach by one of two thugs he surprised ransacking a Dorchester house.

A neighbor who heard the shooting immediately phoned the information to the Boston Evening American Newstip Editor. On the street minutes later was the Boston Evening American with the story, checked and told in detail.

To this Dorchester resident goes this week's first prize of $25 in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser weekly newstip contest in which $50 is awarded.

Precedent was established in Chelsea court when a Malden man paid $1000 on an automobile charge. For this tip an interested third prize of $5.

A Back Bay cab driver for attempted holdup story tip; an East Weymouth driver for dormitory fire story; a Boston attorney for tip on a drowning; a Somerville laborer for news of a train fatality; a South Boston resident for police story.

A Brookline housewife for news of a fire rescue; a North End stenographer for story of recovery of boy's body; a Brighton resident for truck accident story; a Cambridge housewife for auto accident news; a Watertown salesman for gas station explosion story.

Jewish Attacks Hit by Author

Addressing more than 2500 listeners in the Brookline temple, the famous Jewish novelist and playwright, Sholem Asch, warned that every mass persecution is a danger not only for Jews but for the world.

The novelist was aiming his remarks at Germany. He said:

"The persecutions there began with the Jews, and today it is the Catholics. No Jew can have peace of mind and feel safe so long as a member of his race is persecuted and oppressed for no other reason than he is a Jew."

REVERE MAYOR WARS ON LIQUOR SPOTS

Mayor James O'Brien of Revere plans to wipe out half the licensed liquor establishments now operating in his city, he revealed today during a stormy session before the State Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

The Revere mayor appeared before the commission in protest to the granting of summer liquor licenses for which there were 14 applicants.

"I am opposed to the further granting of liquor licenses in Revere this summer, on purely civic reasons," ayor O'Brien stated.

"If I don't get any help from this commission to carry out my ultimate plan to wipe out liquor establishments in Revere by 50 per cent, I shall do it alone or take my case to the state legislature," he concluded.

UP ON APPEAL

Mayor O'Brien did not state the number of liquor places in Revere but under the law there can be only 48 all year round licenses and six summer permits.

The hearing today was on appeal of the 14 applicants seeking summer licenses since their applications had been rejected by the Revere Licensing Board.

Charges that the Revere Liquor Dealers' Association is trying to make the city of Revere "a closed shop" were made by August Rowland, counsel for a group of applicants.

This, in turn, was denied by Elmer Atherton, president of the association, who stated that their opposition is based on the danger of Revere boulevard becoming "cheap and corrupt, and no place for women and children of Boston as a playground."

At one time during the hearing, enlivened by impromptu remarks from persons in the room, Mayor O'Brien denied "working in" with the Liquor Dealers' Association since the applicants for the seasonal licenses were not members of the association.

ASK TAVERN LICENSES

International Glaming House, Squire road and Washington avenue; Squire-road Tavern, 604 Squire road; Ridgway Construction Company, 160 Boulevard, and Elly G. Hashem, 235 Boulevard.

Neal Withers, 530 Winthrop avenue, and Frederick J. Smith, 1145 North Shore road.

The Blame Shifters

REPRESENTATIVE CANNON of Missouri has offered a resolution in Congress empowering the President to make a maximum reduction of fifteen per cent in all appropriations.

It would, in effect, be further abdication of the authority of Congress over expenditures to the President.

It is, perhaps, an anxious effort to shift responsibility to the President for subsequent expenditures and possible extravagances, the intention being to make Congress appear as an innocent party.

As a matter of fact, control of the finances of the Government is entirely in the hands of Congress and cannot be abdicated.

The responsibility is there, also, and remains there.

It does not have to take the President's advice, but if it does, the RESPONSIBILITY for what follows is that of Congress.

For delegating its powers to the President, the Congress is likewise accountable. The President is not so much to blame for asking for them as Congress is to blame for GIVING them.

The basic fact about appropriations is that CONGRESS MAKES THEM and therefore SPENDS THE MONEY. If it plays politics, it is cheap politics, as far as Congress is concerned, but EXPENSIVE politics, as far as the country is concerned.

CONGRESS is responsible for bureaucracy, and Congress is responsible for loading up the Bureaus with relatives of the Congressmen and with political followers and parasites.

For the reckless use of its powers to tax, the extravagance of expenditure and the abandonment of constitutional functions, CONGRESS IS SOLELY RESPONSIBLE.

When the people get tired of misgovernment and misappropriation of funds and misuse of powers, they will DISCIPLINE CONGRESS. And it DESERVES to be disciplined.

The Right Way

His address in Worcester Sunday was a sensible approach to the unemployment problem, which in three years has cost Massachusetts more than $200,000,000 without revealing a permanent solution.

Before we provide jobs and good wages for all who want them, the Governor tells us, we must assist and build up the small business enterprises of our State.

The depression in New England resulted in a marked decrease in the number of smaller businesses, as well as a serious curtailment of numerous larger enterprises.

The States, cities and counties, with the Federal Government's assistance, tried desperately to make relief a substitute for private employment. But the experiment was a failure from the start, with no group, save possibly a few politicians, satisfied with it.

Now, under the leadership of the Governor, Massachusetts appears to be returning to sanity and placing her faith in private employment with more jobs and better wages for all.

The State Legislature should support Mr. Hurley's commendable efforts. Our Senators and Representatives in Washington should also help him.

We owe our small businessmen the same consideration that we have given to the larger enterprises. Let us give it to them.

A Library Problem

WHAT is the function of a modern library? Should it be a fountain of knowledge, bubbling ceaselessly for the enlightenment of all? Or should it be a depository for the literary relics of the past?

Those questions interest Cambridge people, especially Senator Arthur Blanchard who asks them.

It is his contention that the Cambridge Public Library is a "bookless library" from a practical point of view, that last year only $5000 was spent for new books in contrast to $62,500 for salaries.

He points out that in the library there are such treasures as the Ubelius Bible, believed to be the first Protestant Bible printed; the Longfellow collection of 79 volumes, and the Holmes, Lowell, Wyman and Professor Rolfe collections.

And he suggests that the trustees dispose of these to the highest bidder and spend the money for newer and less valuable books that could be freely circulated.

There is much in what the Senator says; a dollar copy of a good book in his hand undoubtedly will do a reader's mind more good than the hundred-thousand-dollar original in a showcase.

But Cambridge, wisely, will probably decide to keep the old and buy more of the new.

New York Day by Day

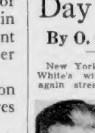
By O. O. McIntyre



O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 4 — Gilbert Whitney writer in New York again stressed his fame as a leading international wit. For 20 years he has made a villa near Paris his base, but his sallies are as well known in London, along the Riviera, in Shanghai and New York.

In appearance he might be William Jennings Bryan in a Latin Quarter hat and flowing tie, plus a nervous energy that suggests a hockey team in the last moment of play. As a portrait painter his sitters include many of the notables of England, France and America.

Several of his canvases hang in the Luxembourg and his murals decorate the Oklahoma Capitol and public buildings in Washington. A serious worker for months at a stretch, he likes to take several months off now and then to relax and let himself go.

On such occasions he usually heads for a stay with his life-long friend, Measmore Kendall, the New York capitalist. With White as a guest, a dinner party usually becomes an event. He is a brother of Stewart Edward White, the novelist, and a native of Michigan.

When White comes into Paris from his country estate the Place Vendome goes into a sort of Roman holiday—and the Ritz bars declare an extradividend from the sudden puff of patronage. One of his favorite Americans is Charles G. Norris, the novelist, and when the latter arrives for his seasonal stay Paris really becomes Gay Paree.

The hundred and one little open-fronted drink stands that stipple Broadway offer an economic problem to the owners when the fury of winter is on. Their rents are high and their cooling concoctions are not in particular demand. Yet any number more than made their way by ingenious methods when things were a bit dull by serving 10-cent breakfasts and luncheons and 15-cent dinners.

One notices a 10-cent breakfast is an egg any style, slice of toast, one strip of bacon and a cup of coffee or milk. A 15-cent dinner includes one of three kinds of stew, a generous cup of coffee and a slice of cake with a sliver of cheese.

Mostly the patrons are out-of-doors workers—taxi drivers, doormen, etc., who gulp the lunch or dinner as a prelude to a filling meal off duty.

Architects have increasing calls for cozy floor homes in the suburbs. Some of the most elaborate this summer will be one-storied. And the Big Idea is an expansive living room with a drop leap table at one end on which to dine. Servant quarters are wisely and separate.

Many home builders predict that 80 per cent of the country residences of the future will follow this plan. People who have lived in them once will live in no other type.

The structures are keyed to quick living—the breakfast-in-bedders, of course there in the added advantage of cutting down the number of servants.

Ben Finney, who has been hithering and thithering around the globe for many years and was long known as the Broadway night clubs' most consistent patron, has finally decided Waikiki Beach, Hawaii, is the world's prize spot.

He has anchored there and secured a site upon which he expects to build and operate one of the finest night clubs in the world. It will have but 250 rooms, all de luxe.

The show girl who probably had more admirers and beaux anxious to be seen with her in the after-theater hours during her toast-of-the-town reign was Lillian Lorraine. She long antedated Tallulah Bankhead as The Original Glamour Girl.

But playboys with $100 tips had no especial appeal for her. She liked laughs, and, like Fanny Brice with her Roger Davis, Miss Lorraine was more than likely to be accompanied by some obscurity breveted only for banter among the boys at the corner drug store.

She had a rousing and musical Irish laugh and when she gave it full-throated play it was the most contagious I have ever heard. As contagious as Joe Moore's.

I ran into a crotchety old managing editor of mine yesterday. His always thought it surprising I was able to wangle a living out of a calling so long geared. But his best deflation was at this meeting. After a brief talk, he inquired as he turned to go: "What kind of work do you do now?" I walked right under the spout of a fire plug without grazing my hat.

Just Around the Corner

By Nelson Harding

Disappointed at each turning
That he passes on that roadway,
Misinformed by hopeful signboards
Seen at each successive corner

Is the weary, patient plodder
Loaded with a heavy burden,
Seeking for that journey's ending,
Always "just around the corner."

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

The campaign against burlesque shows in New York City reminds us that burlesque has an ancient and honorable past.

Burlesque performances, in which the manners, customs and famous authors of the times were ridiculed, were known to the Greeks and Romans. Aristophanes, the Greek comic playwright, used burlesque with great effect on dramatists himself.

"Lysistrata," a burlesque on war, by Aristophanes, recently had a long run in New York and Paris. Lucian, the Greek satirist, burlesqued the gods themselves—when they were on their last legs.

The best burlesques we have ever had in America were the old Weber-Fields comedies, and today the best "spoofs" are the Mickey Mouse cartoons.

The crown that will be put on his head (and taken off immediately because of its weight) on May 12 was made for Queen Victoria.

In it are a ruby that belonged to the Black Prince (son of Edward the Third), a sapphire of Charles the Second and Queen Elizabeth's earrings.

The crown was originally a wreath of leaves of flowers put on the heads of poets and winners in Greek athletic games. It afterward became in Rome the symbol of absolute power.

As far as European rulers go, the saying of Shakespeare that "uneasy lies the head that wears the crown" may be extended nowadays to uneasy lies the head of a ruler that wears a crown, a derby or even a yachting cap.

Nothing is greater than MIND.

MIND is man's only weapon against disease, oblivion and destruction. Mind is the greatest thing in the universe. The brain of man is a kind of Scotland Yard that sends out detectives forever to pursue truth. It has for feet reason and for wings imagination.

Through telescope, microscope, and spectroscope the veiled mystery of truth flies while the old sleuth, intelligence, is always on new trials to corner it.

The mind of man is at war with superstition, intolerance and opposition. The philosophers, the thinkers, the poets, the scientists have blasted to atoms a thousand fortresses of error. But the war—the pursuit—goes on. And it will go on forever so long as we remain free.

Our industrial genius is only the root. Mind is the flower. LET US CULTIVATE IT.

Some years ago Sir William Osler, English physician, created a sensation by saying that a man's usefulness ended when he was 40—in spite of the obvious fact that a list of men who have done great things after 40 would make a good-sized book.

Now the "usefulness" limit has been pushed up to 70. But that's merely a beginning for Harry Wooding, mayor of Danville, Va., who is 95 and has held the office for 45 years.

Mayor Wooding says he will resign when he is no longer able to perform the duties of his office.

That is a crispy item for Dr. Walter Pitkin, who is now making a series of talks over WINS on "After Forty."

In Ol' Virginny life begins at 95.

A woman, living in poor circumstances, the other day entered Bellevue Hospital, New York, and announced:

"I am the daughter of the late Emperor Franz Josef, ruler of Austria-Hungary."

She had bank books and stocks and bonds on her showing that she possessed $15,000.

This is the "will-to-grandeur," as the German philosopher, Nietzsche, called it. It is the old "I-Am-Napoleon" delusion.

This delusion sometimes overcomes the best of us. Willie Gallacher, Communist member of Parliament, accuses the British cabinet members of will-to-grandeur because they need $473 a week to live on. Willie says his own $15 per is plenty.

It is our pleasant delusions that make life so enjoyable.

'Yure's Truly'

By Winston Norman

Dept of Agriculture
Wash. D. C.
Dear Dept:

I seen a squib in the papers, where you predicted that the Farmers will be over-run with Grasshoppers this summer, without they get plenty of rain, quick. I sent the squib to my Uncle Enoch, he's a farmer, and from the answer that came back, which I am hereby copying off, it looks like the Bug Mennace is even worst than you figgered.

DEAR NEPHEW: Thanks for the bad news, where the Govt threatens me with Grasshoppers, but that ain't the insect us farmers is most worried about.

Last few years we bin getting swarms of a new kind of pest, which walks on its hind legs and ain't got any wings to speak of. The name of it is the Inspector Bug which develops out of the Bureaucrat Worm.

We had a big flight of the critters last summer. They buzz in your ear like a Congressional Borer, only they are harder to get rid of. The sky was black with swarms of the pest, which seemed to be coming from towards the Potomac River, and on a clear night you could see their headlights gleaming for miles.

But that ain't all, Nephew. My spring wheat suffered bad from political rust, and Statistic Bugs was hopping around so thick I couldn't git my plowing done. Even which the Insect Life, us farmers was dang near ruint by that Hurricane of oratory that come along jest after the wust flood of spending since Noah.

On top of them other miseryes we got a episodic of Chuckle-Headed Pork Worms, which feeds on the tender young shoots of the Budget, and in addition to all them pests being back with us this season, they say that a swarm of Tax-Eaters, the like of which the world has never saw, will sweep over the country about harvest time and eat up any profits that's left.

So send along them Grasshoppers, Nephew. Us farmers will be glad to fight some kind of a pest that it ain't Homicide to use arsenic on.

Yours,
UNCLE ENOCH.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Too many people delude themselves with the idea that when a State or municipality gets a Federal grant it is getting a donation — getting money for nothing. They want to believe that a Federal grant is a gift. But, as Congressman Dies of Texas says, "They pay it back on every suit of clothes they buy, they pay it back with the groceries they buy. The taxes levied upon the manufacturers are passed on to the consumers, and in the workingmen in the form of reduced wages and salaries. We might as well face the fact there is no such thing as something for nothing."

You may think that because you do not receive a tax bill you are not paying your share of governmental squandering. Don't fool yourself that way. The Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, after a years' study of the effects of taxes on prices, reports that the $18-a-week laborer or clerk who owns no property pays $116 a year in hidden taxes. In other words, he is taxed INDIRECTLY at the rate of 12 per cent on every dollar he earns.

According to this insurance company survey, the taxes CONCEALED in various commodities amount to 7.1 per cent on food, 8 per cent on clothing, 9.5 per cent on fuel and light bills, 10.2 per cent on miscellaneous household items, and 20.1 per cent on automobile ownership and operation. And of the rent you pay, an average of nearly 25 per cent is for taxes. These computations do not include Social Security taxes. You get sick and tired of HEARING about taxes, but that isn't a circumstance to how sick and tired you are going to get of PAYING these taxes as they go higher and higher.

"Those people in there wanted to work and they had a right to. They were entitled to food and I told the state police to see they got it."

Certainly the right to work is as important as the right to strike. Any man has a right to quit his job whenever he pleases, but no interference should be tolerated from any source with people who want to keep on working.

Ten days after the Boston Circuit Court of Appeals held the old age insurance part of the Social Security Law unconstitutional, the federal government had that case in the United States Supreme Court. That is said to be a record for quick appeals. But it goes to show that litigation can be speeded up when the litigants want quick action. The courts themselves are to blame for little of the law's delays.

The Human Side of the News

Black, white, brown, yellow and variegated races all have experienced the self-engendered mass hysteria which sets up fantastic and often phoney messiahs. We pure Nordics look down on Father Divine and his black host of Harlem from no great eminence of assured sanity and reason. From the day the first woodsman sank his axe in a tree, we have had emotionally supercharged saviors of one kind or another, not only hallelujah shouters and Bible Diggers, but equally febrille salvationists in economics, medicine and all that touches on that persistent human trait—"the will to believe."

The old Park Row crowd is scattered now, but sometimes we meet by chance. It happened that on the day of the stabbing incident in Father Divine's heaven I fell in with several old friends and we strolled back a few years down Queer street, noting some of the most bizarre disciples of St. Vitus and their adventures in "Moronia."

I had the New York end of Alexander Dowie's Eastern trip. The shrill, pudgy little Scotch evangelist's invasion of the metropolis was a resounding flop. He heaped anathema on the modern Gomorrah, and the town was sizzling with his Scriptural imprecations, but he was licked—that was all there was to it—as Billy Sunday was licked in pagan San Francisco. This in spite of Dowie's thumping big success on the shores of Lake Michigan.

A SHREWD MAN

One of my friends, a former Chicago newspaperman, told me a story I had never known about Dowie's last days, and his downfall in his dementia praecox kingdom of Zion City, 50 miles north of Chicago.

"Dowie was an educated man," he said, "and a shrewd organizer and businessman. Working in the lower I. Q. levels, he was the most effective crowd inciter I have ever seen, but he was untracked before any less inflammable audience. His Zion City was, and still is, a unique theocracy with a shrewdly contrived economic pattern which has somehow held it together for more than 30 years.

"'Peace' was their watchword, as in Father Divine's kingdom. But there was no peace in Chicago, great, lusty and brawling, was feeling its oats as a go-getting metropolis, and reporters from the Chicago newspapers bedeviled Dowie and his kingdom unmercifully. The mediaeval theocracy was strangely encysted in a highly mundane kingdom of pork, wheat and steel, a kingdom of high kicking and low thinking.

"Dowie screamed at the reporters and blistered them with all the excoriations which seem to come handy to the righteous. There was a continual uproar, but the kingdom stayed on. Some Oriental potentate ever was a more object obedience than Dowie. He was a healer, and it was his supposed miracles that had attracted the lame, the halt and the blind by the thousands.

"Dowie went to Jamaica for a long stay. One of the leading disciples, close to the throne, was Wilbur Glenn Voliva, a tall, dark mysterious man who had been a circuit-riding preacher. In Dowie's absence, he acquired a tremendous following. The reporters tagged him as an usurper. Whether that was true or not, there was dissension and revolt, with Voliva watching aloofly and saying little. An important factor was Dowie's son, known only as 'Gladstone, the unkissed," due to a chance remark that he had never been thus saluted.

A DRAMATIC HOUR

"He was an anaemic young man, with a thin, wavering voice and a corn-silk moustache. The rumor was that he was dealing under the table with Voliva. Dowie got wind of all this and started home, letting out a blast of Scriptural denunciation at every jump on the way. He cabled the congregation to meet him at the station.

"They were there by the thousands as the train pulled in on a drizzling spring day—Dowie, hotelie, with an undercurrent of dangerous crowd hysteria. Dowie dore into the crowd in his open victoria, stood up and did the most magnificent job of tongue-lashing I have ever heard. With 15 minutes of this he had them thoroughly licked and ordered them to be in the tabernacle at 9 o'clock that night.

"Again he sprayed them with fire and brimstone. They were cowed and beaten. One recreant citizen began to crawl up the aisle on his belly, groaning and moaning and begging forgiveness. Dowie had turned the tide. It was his instinct of triumph—but only an instant.

"There was an interruption. Just at the climax of a magnificent and sulphurous phillipic, Gladstone, the unkissed had arisen. 'Brothers and sisters,' he said, in his high, piping voice, 'don't you believe a word he says. There isn't a word of truth in it.'

"The black men whipped Dowie's victoria up the hill with the ravening crowd behind. The gates of his castle clanged shut, with the mob a hand's reach away. Dowie died there six months later. Voliva took charge and is still waging his campaign to prove that the earth is flat."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

They're mud on your heel!

My father said it to me. Whether he himself coined the phrase I wouldn't know. Whether it's as fine a philosophy as I have for tackling this chance world — so I'm passing it on.

I was still in the husk . . . one of those incandescent, dreamy young sisters, seeing all things through the glamour of my own ideals. A haughty and petty, vicious act had roused me to a realization of reality. Frightened, furious, I had fled to my father—sobbed out my distress.

Gently my father's hand patted the tangled curls, the hot, tear-stained young face . . . drew me close until the clamor in me stilled. Then, in that quiet voice which pain had made so deeply understanding he spoke:

"Never mind it, little girl; never mind it. Life is filled with such things. Ugly things. Unfair, stupid, malicious things, done by people with frightened hearts and sick minds. And there's nothing you can do to stop them.

"So don't waste your energy on them, child. Don't let them spoil your faith or cripple your courage. Pass them by . . . ignore them.

"Keep your chin up and your eyes on the stars . . . these things are mud on your heel!"

COMMON SENSE

"Mud on your heel"—what wisdom lay in those four words! What perfect balance and power over petty circumstance. The man who spoke them had always been poor. His life was filled with the cruel and constant hardship of the penniless pioneer.

I never saw him save in shabby clothes . . . smiling bravely through lips that were twisted by pain. He died young, without ever knowing common comfort, much less luxury. Always he had to battle.

But from that battle he had drawn a set of values that was a greater heritage to me, his child, than a million in gold. And I knew, even that there were only a few great, fine things that really counted. All other things were trivial and to him they were mud on your heel! And he took them in his stride!

That sneering, belittling smile—

That sugar-coated flattery which is planned to make a fool of you.

That humiliating story which is told you "for your own good"—

LOOK ABOVE THEM

They're all the product of sick spirits, darkened by ignorance, jealousy, greed, envy and malice . . . as inevitable in our semi-savage state as the trash that litters the road you're behind you walk.

Don't waste your strength fighting them. Don't drain your heart grieving over them, or trying to explain them away. Don't let them spoil your faith or cripple your courage. Pass them by . . . ignore them . . . take them in your stride. . . .
